

What can you expect from each city council candidate if the person is elected? Although it's still early in the Valley campaigning, The Times hopes to give readers an idea of what each candidate plans for the future if elected. Today's story focuses on Gurnam S. Sidhu who is seeking election to Livermore City Council. See Page 3 for the sketch.

'Cityhood' study stirs new hassle

DUBLIN — The type of study to be made about the feasibility of incorporating Dublin has aroused controversy among people involved in the issue.

Citizens for Dublin Cityhood (CDC) proposed to make a preliminary study using $1000 worth of county funding slated for such use. Their contention is their study would get the proposed incorporation ball rolling faster toward an election ballot. If some other group or agency wanted to do a more in-depth study later they could take up from where CDC left off, CDC Chairman Dave Burton contended.

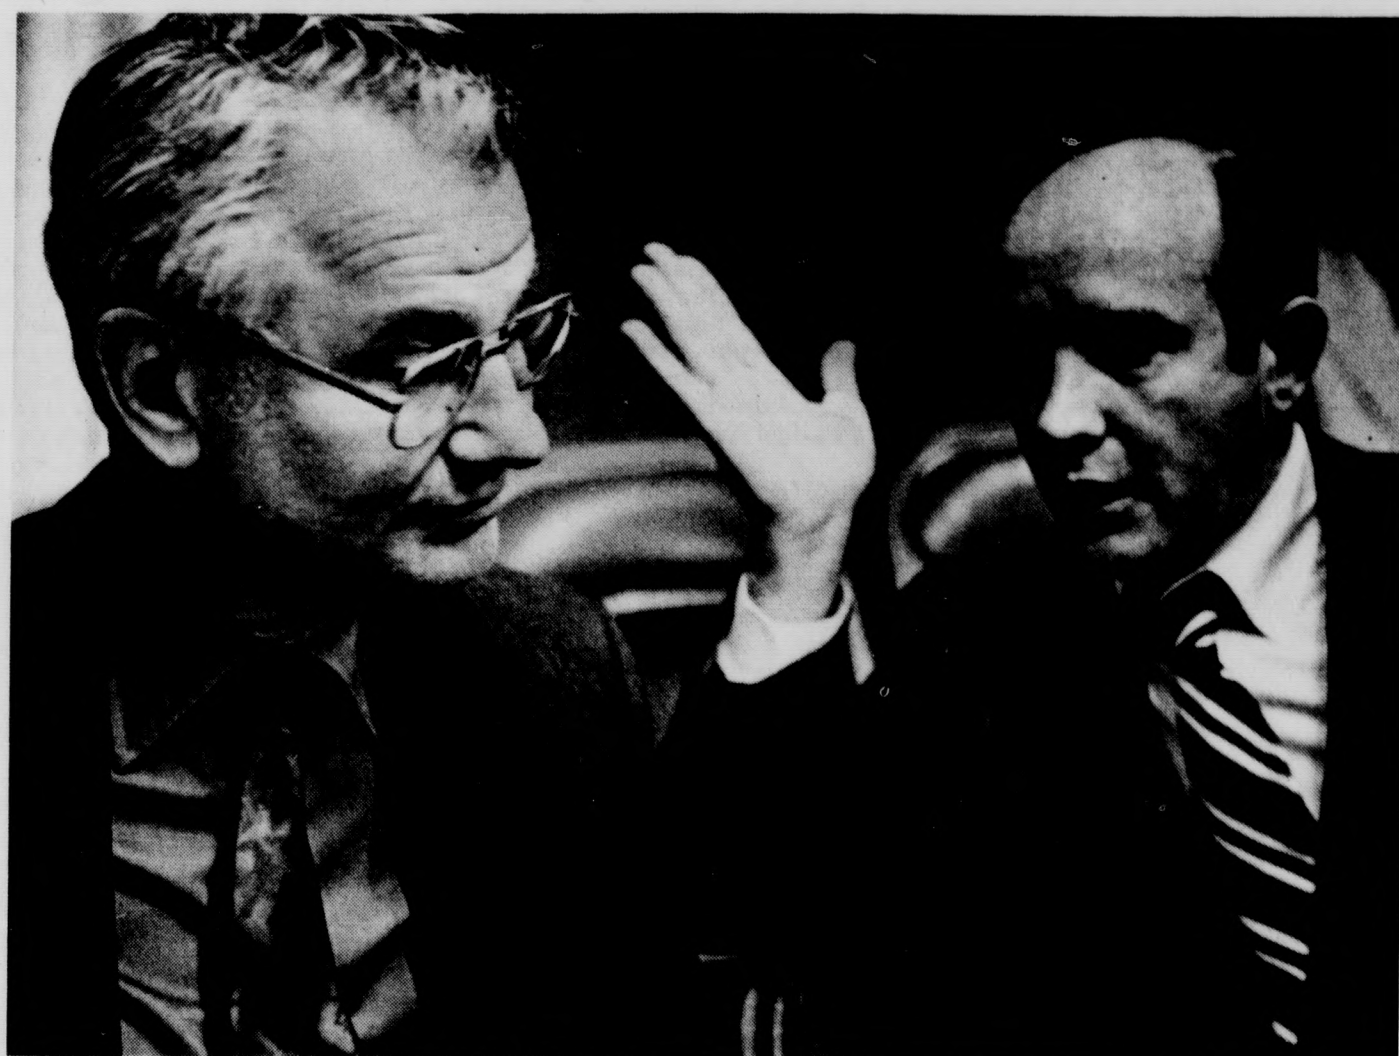

The Dublin Chamber of Commerce formed a steering committee to verify facts researched by CDC committees. Since county supervisors said the $1000 had to be channeled through a public agency, the chamber applied for the money. The chamber was turned down on the basis the preliminary study would not be "broad based" enough. CDC is not considered to be a public agency.

Another faction declares a more in-depth study costing between $10,000 and $15,000 is a better way to go. This side includes Alameda County Supervisor Valerie Raymond, Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) General Manager Paul Ryan and Roland Mayne. Mayne is executive officer of the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO).

Whatever a study route is taken, LAFCO has to give its approval, Mayne reminded.

Mayne said LAFCO has two main legal requirements that have to be met by any study proposing incorporation.

One is to receive a resolution of application or a petition signed by 25 per cent of Dublin's registered voters. This is in accordance with AB-

Roland Mayne, left, and Paul Ryan discuss how Dublin's proposed incorporation could affect the Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD). Mayne is executive officer of the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO); Ryan, general manager of DSRSD.

1533, a new law that was effective Jan. 1, 1978.

The other is to have a "proper legal description" of the area proposing to incorporate, Mayne said.

"An environmental impact report has to also be settled but I doubt if that would be difficult," Mayne added. "It is important to have a study that incorporates long-term projections as well as other vital information."

He said the toughest question to be answered about Dublin's proposed incorporation would be the impact on DSRSD.

A financial report would also be vital, he continued.

"A major source of revenue in that area is sales tax and if Pleasanton puts in shopping centers across the highway from Dublin, that would have a serious effect on Dublin."

Mayne added alternatives such as annexation should also be included in the feasibility study.

"The kind of information needed for a feasibility study is not too easy to come by. The work is usually done by a consulting firm," Mayne explained.

Beverly Lane volunteered in the fall to help CDC with their preliminary study for $1000. She is a veteran of the Danville/Alamo/San Ramon incorporation effort that failed over a year ago. Her masters thesis also dealt with the subject of incorporation. She said she had planned to coordinate CDC findings.

"It wouldn't have been an in-depth analysis but would have been fairly broad," she said. "I would have included alternatives. Since AB-1533 has come into effect, I would have to work with Mayne and Alameda County legal counsel to find out how they interpret the new law."

Although her educational workload has increased since last fall, Lane said she still would consider helping with the feasibility study if CDC asked her to continue.

Sex crime case

Valley parents irked at courts

LIVERMORE — The parents of a young teen girl who was sexually molested by a neighbor found out the hard way that crime victims often suffer twice.

Once from the malefactor and once from the court system.

The constant delays, adding up to a year and a half before the defendant was convicted, were only part of the story.

So was seeing the malefactor walking around the neighborhood free and allegedly molesting another young girl.

And so was hiring a lawyer to translate the legal gobbledeygook spoken by the deputy District Attorney.

There is more. Much more.

One of the biggest griefs were the continual postponements. To an attorney, it's just another postponement of a hearing or trial, but to the victim of a crime, it continues the long, agonizing wait, the embarrassment, the emotional pain, the suspense of waiting for the other shoe to drop.

"There were times when I wanted to go over to his house (the eventually convicted defendant) and do something," said Mrs. X. (Her name is not used here because of the nature of the crime.) "There were other times when we said what's the use, let's drop the whole thing."

But they couldn't drop the case. Justice had to be done, not only to help their daughter feel right, but also for others who could become victims later.

The combination of letting the defendant out of jail on his own recognizance and the long delays granted to him resulted in a second alleged sexual attack on another neighbor, said Mrs. X.

She can't understand why a judge would let such a defendant out on his own recognizance instead of keeping him locked up. He served time previously for a similar sexual attack, she said.

Mr. and Mrs. X were caught in a bind. They did not fear retribution from the molestor, but they felt a tremendous conflict. They had to let their neighbors know about him for their children's safety. They could not let other children know directly, though, for fear that in their immaturity they would taunt their daughter. So they got the word around among parents as best they could.

There was one bright spot in the proceedings. The state has a fund for such victims and it pays for psychotherapy, something the young woman has been in now for more than a year.

Mr. and Mrs. X dealt with several deputy district attorneys. The defendant had two lawyers and that added to more delays, said Mrs. X.

It took nine months to get to a preliminary hearing, another nine months for a trial, she said.

"We got lost in the shuffle and our daughter had that much more dread because it was that much longer to testify," said Mrs. X.

When it came time to testify in the closed courtroom, Mrs. X could not even accompany her daughter into the courtroom. Now, thankfully, the law has just been changed to allow any molesting or rape victim to bring into closed hearings one woman of her own choice, said Mrs. X.

The district attorney's response to the continuances was that the courts are overloaded anyway so let's not fight the continuances, said Mrs. X.

The one exception was the last DA handling the case; he spent a lot of time on it, she said. "And people behind the scenes said another DA was frustrated by the delays, but we couldn't understand the legal terms she used. I wish they would spend extra time explaining these things in layman's language."

"We hired an attorney to deal with the district attorney and also to consider filing a civil suit, too, in case the criminal court did not convict the defendant," said Mrs. X. "We didn't want to see him go unpunished."

Concerned about what they see as a need to reform the slow court system, the couple fired off 120 letters to superior and municipal court judges, state legislators, Congress

New priority sought for sewer plant

Funding to expand the Dublin - San Ramon Services District sewer plant by 1980 has been carried over to this year's preliminary priority list for government grants.

The project, designed to enlarge plant capacity from 4.2 million gallons per day (mgd) to 7.34 mgd, has been estimated to cost $3.3 million. The federal government would fund 75 percent, with the state and local government sharing the other 25 percent.

The expansion would include capacity to take over connections to Pleasanton's aging Sunol Boulevard sewage plant. Pleasanton and DSRSD are attempting to work out arrangements for the transfer.

A $2.6 million project to construct an interceptor line between the two plants was also approved for grant funding in the preliminary list. Raw sewage would be pumped through this line to the DSRSD plant where it would be treated and released through the planned Livermore - Amador Valley Water Management Agency (LAVWMA) pipeline, also planned for completion in 1980.

Proposals to expand Livermore's sewage treatment capacity and increase the land-spray of treated effluent were put farther down the priority list.

Construction projects that would increase treatment capacity from 5 mgd to 6.2 mgd, and then again to 7.4 mgd, were assigned funding for initial steps beginning in 1981-82.

Funding to study land acquisition and new facilities for land-spray irrigation of treated effluent was assigned to fiscal year 1981-82. Additional reclamation projects were left unscheduled.

Volunteer aide submits study plan

DUBLIN — An outline for a preliminary study about the feasibility of incorporating Dublin was submitted by Beverly Lane to Citizens for Dublin Cityhood (CDC).

Lane, a veteran of the Danville/Alamo/San Ramon incorporation effort, volunteered last fall to coordinate CDC findings into a report. She presented CDC with her outline then.

Since she volunteered, Dublin's proposed incorporation effort has bogged down into questions of who should execute the study and for how much. Lane offered to do it for $1000 worth of county funding already slated for such use.

County supervisors and local government agencies contend it would take between $10,000 and $15,000 to do a "proper" study.

Lane offered the following outline: Title: Feasibility Study for Dublin Cityhood. I. Introduction. (a) Statement of proposal ... to study feasibility of incorporating Dublin.

(b) Reasons for incorporating... area of social, economic and historical homogeneity.

(c) Brief history of area.

(d) Economic and social characteristics. (e) Population description.

II. Proposed form of government.

III. Boundaries of city.

IV. Existing governmental services. (a) All special districts. (b) Proposed changes in district in a city. (c) General county services.

IV. Financing the city. (a) Subventions from state. (b) Locally raised revenues. (c) Federal revenue sharing.

VI. Proposed city budget.

Lane said she also planned to include alternatives to incorporation such as annexation, status quo, an area planning commission and a municipal area council.

She said her outline form had been used by many other communities as a supplement to their applications to the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO).

"I foresaw my working with CDC as a consultant, combining their research work and mine then doing a final compilation of the findings."

Lane is completing work on her masters degree. Part of her thesis dealt with the subject of incorporation, she said. Although her educational workload has increased since she offered her services to CDC, Lane said she still would help if asked.

Dublin school starts pupil crossing patrol

DUBLIN — Fifteen sixth grade students at Dublin Elementary School have commenced duties as crossing guards to assist youngsters going to and from school.

All are volunteers and have been organized by Bo Isaef, principal at the school on Vomic Road.

The students have received instruction and assistance from Isaef as well as the Sheriff's Department and California Highway Patrol officers. Each will wear yellow caps and jackets, a white belt and carry a hand-held "STOP" sign.

Isaef said the youngsters will be stationed at the crossing on Vomic in front of the swimming pool complex and at Landale and Vomic. The uniformed "safety patrol" will be at the crossings at the following times: 8:10 a.m., 11 a.m., 11:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 2, 3 and 3:30 p.m.

The uniforms being used are left over from the days when Dublin previously had crossing guards.

Current sixth grade patrol members are:

Eddie Schlessner, Linda Bishop, Chris Hartje, Danny Houston, Ann

Bowers, Sue Dietz, Steve Machado, Shawn Conley, Brettina Grisham, Debbie Lawson, Cliff Andresen, Steven King, Mike Grimstead, Jay Kurth, and Jeff Crouse.

Brettina Grisham is one of sixth grade volunteer crossing guards at Dublin Elementary School.

Pleasanton names new top counsel

PLEASANTON — It came as no "particular surprise," but deputy city attorney Harvey E. Levine didn't expect the good news so soon.

City council Monday night unanimously appointed 31-year-old Levine to the post of city attorney, effective the day after current attorney Ken Scheidig resigns Feb. 17 to assume the deputy city attorney post in Concord.

Levine will earn $25,500 a year in his new position, $4,000 more than in his previous job.

The 1974 Hastings Law School graduate came to work in Pleasanton over two years ago. During his years as deputy city attorney he advised the planning commission, the design review board and other city committees or officials engaged in planning matters, as well as regular ordinance and contract matters.

Before working here, Levine served one year on the California Coastal Zoning and Conservation Commission's legal staff.

While Scheidig was often called a legal activist during his five years as city attorney, Levine expects to contain his advice to strictly legal matters.

"My view now is that I will stay away from issues of policy, leaving those to elected officials. I plan to leave city administration to city administrators and I'll concentrate on the legal problems of the city."

Harvey E. Levine, promoted to city attorney.

Levine quickly admits there are many legal problems involving sewage and developers facing Pleasanton. However, he has worked on many of them with Scheidig and agrees with the legal courses Scheidig has set.

Levine may or may not have an assistant.

Council member Ken Mercer told The Times council decided during the Monday executive session to wait until the next fiscal year's budget comes up for review in April before hiring a new deputy city attorney.

Scheidig also served as attorney for the Livermore-Amador Valley Water Management Agency while in Pleasanton and will keep that post. Since Levine won't have LAVWMA work taking up his time, he may not need an assistant, according to Mercer.

Levine intends to move to Pleasanton from his Oakland home this summer, delaying the move urged by council until after his wife gives birth to their first child in March.

School officials focus on future bargaining

"Collective Bargaining and School Leadership: Where Do We Go From Here?" is the theme of a workshop to be presented at Castlewood Country Club in Pleasanton Thursday.

Sponsored by the Alameda County School Boards Association and Region 6 of the Association of Northern California School Administrators, the workshop commences at 4 p.m. and will be followed by a dinner meeting at 7:30 p.m.

Amador and Pleasanton schools superintendent Bruce Newlin is program coordinator for the workshop and Mrs. Evelyn Kipp, superintendent of the Newark Unified School District, is chairperson.

Workshop sections will be led by Dr. James Slezak, superintendent of the Mount Diablo Unified School District; William Rogers, director of public education for San Juan Unified School District; Heidi Williamson, negotiator for the California School Boards Association; and Dr. Richard Williams, professor at the UNLA School of Education.

The dinner meeting is sponsored by ANSBA, and is scheduled to begin at 7:30 with Dr. Glenn Hoffmann, superintendent of the Santa Clara County Office of Education, speaking on administrator relations.

A short business meeting will be conducted by ANSBA president Dolores Wagner.

Manuel Prado of the Livermore school board and Betty Nostrand of the Pleasanton school board are directors of ANSBA.

SRV planning group approves 99-acre split

DANVILLE — A four-parcel split of 99 acres on Morgan Territory Road in the Tassajara area has been approved by the San Ramon Valley Planning Commission a week before a scheduled study session on the impact of such subdivisions in the area.

The commission voted 3-2 in favor of the minor subdivision of property owned by four Alameda County sheriff's deputies who said they plan to live on the parcels with their families working as "gentleman farmers."

Commission John Meakin and Chairman Andrew Young voted "no," siding with the Contra Costa County planning staff's recommendation to postpone action until after Wednesday's study session.

members, and local officials.

Not everyone answered. The Livermore City Council did not reply. Livermore Police Chief Ron Lindgren was the only city official with a response. He sympathized, but felt he couldn't do much, that private citizens like the X family have a better chance of turning it around, if that's possible.

The federal people pointed out the courts are a state responsibility. The state legislators, for the most part, talked about bills they authored or voted for. One of them, AB 513 by Assemblyman Ron Cordova, caught the eye of the couple. It says that the victim has the same right to a speedy trial that the defendant does.

The couple heard from Citizens for Law and Order, which they feel works kag for the same goals they wish. Mrs. X also had praise for Bay Area Women Against Rape, National Organization for Women, which sponsors rape legislation, and for Parental Streets, which offered her a shoulder to cry on during her own personal trials and tribulations. "We'd like to see some sort of reform, but we don't know where to start," said Mrs. X. "Some of the problem seems to be the lawyers." "Yes," said Mr. X. "They have a lot of latitude. They seem to run the courtroom instead of the judges."

The X's feel justice has been done in their daughter's case. But not without more pain at the end. The defendant's lawyer called in sick, but the judge told him to appear in court immediately anyway. The judge was tired of all the delays.

Seniors meet on '78 goals

PLEASANTON — Senior citizens can speak out on what they want at a public hearing with the Commission on Aging for Alameda County Thursday, Jan. 26, from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Veterans Memorial building, 301 Main Street.

At that meeting, older adults will have a chance to hear of plans and activities for the coming year, as well as talk about the special problems they face.

City talks growth guides after lost tots comforted

PLEASANTON — There are still some things more important than growth management. Like lost children.

A city council workshop Monday night was delayed a half hour when member Joyce LeNaire walked in the chambers with two small children she found wandering in the rain. One tot with a nose bleed. The rescue truck was called. The mother found. And council belatedly turned back to planning the city's future growth.

Methodically plodding through the proposed residential allocation program's points system, some members raised questions concerning the legal safety of certain sections.

As proposed, developers could get up to 11 points by building homes in areas that would link streets, water lines, sewer lines and trails where there is currently a gap.

Planning staff designed that section of the total 100 points system to encourage development which would complete a city line over other developments which might not be as beneficial to Pleasanton as a whole.

Member Ken Mercer,

however, questioned why the city should give points to one developer who happens to own land which could be used to complete "missing links" for the city. He predicted some developers might challenge that section.

The overall points system is a sore spot with some developers anyway. In fact, all three alternatives to the residential allocation program being considered by council will probably be challenged in the courts, according to city attorney Ken Scheidig, because the plans limit future growth here to 2 percent a year.

At least two developers covered by a 1972 out-of-court settlement for sewage capacity maintain any new city plan shouldn't pre-empt the settlement agreement.

Yet courts have upheld that cities may plan their future growth, thus Scheidig believes developers would lose a prospective court battle.

In the fourth growth workshop Monday, Mercer and member Bill Herlihy raised doubts about the maintenance district idea in the points system.

Under that section, the developer could opt to form a maintenance district for his/her development housing tract, allowing the city to bill homeowners there for any city upkeep of "extra costly features" only related to that development.

Currently taxpayers city-wide pay for upkeep of landscaping, storm drainage pumping and greenbelt maintenance throughout Pleasanton.

Mercer said greenbelts could refer to small parks in a housing area, noting those parks are sometimes used by residents living in other tracts. And Herlihy said he had "serious problems" with billing homeowners in each housing tract for maintenance, instead of spreading all city maintenance bills evenly through taxes.

The maintenance district clause was put in the plan to discourage developers from adding expensive features to their housing areas, according to planning analyst Brian Swift.

Landscaping with trees and plants not native to this area was one example Swift gave for features which are expensive for the city to maintain, but primarily benefit the few people living in one housing area.

In another workshop last night, council expressed doubts about contributions to the city's capital improvement fund — another section of the point system. Herlihy and Mercer compared the section to arm-bending or "blackmail" in order to get money from developers for city improvements.

Council wrapped up studying the point system and scheduled a meeting Monday, January 30, to begin voting on the point system and plan alternatives.

In another matter Monday, council granted $7,500 in additional federal Housing and Community Development funding to the Garnet-Austin vocational rehabilitation center.

Council had denied Garnet-Austin funding when the original HCD funds were allocated in December, however council recently heard the city was being granted more than expected. The vote allocating the late funds to Garnet-Austin passed unanimously.

Senate unit approves lowering drinking age

SACRAMENTO (AP) Despite warning that young drunken drivers could increase, a Senate committee Tuesday approved a proposal allowing voters to decide if the drinking age should be lowered from 21 to 19.

The Governmental Organization Committee voted 6-2, without a vote to spare, to send ACA 55 to the Senate floor, where it will need two-thirds approval to go on the ballot.

If the Senate approves the measure by Jan. 25, it would go on the June 6 ballot. If approved later, it would appear on the Nov. 7 ballot. It cleared the Assembly last summer.

The author, Assemblyman Louis Papan, Daly City, told committee members he believed lowering the age to 19 would reduce the peer pressure to do something illegal. He said the age 19 was chosen because some 18-year-olds are still in high school.

But Capt. William Oliver of the California Highway Patrol and Roger Hagen of the Department of Motor Vehicles said their agencies opposed the measure because they felt drunken driving problems would increase among young people.

Oliver said drivers under 21 are already involved in many accidents where alcohol is a factor. In 1976, he said, drivers between 16 and 20 were involved in 188 felon drunk driving arrests, 6,556 misdemeanor drunken driving arrests and 4,936 public intoxication arrests.

"This is grim evidence that persons under the age of 21 already have access to alcohol through illegal means," Oliver said.

"The drinking driver was a problem in 1939 when I went to high school," interjected Sen. John Dunlap, Napa. "One of the reasons was it was a pretty exciting thing to do because it was against the law. It's a very important element in the motivation factor."

Starbird retires

Ex-LLL head to be picked?

Martin Gottlieb
Special to The Times

Is a distinguished member of the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory staff in line for a top federal post? That possibility looked as good as any this week as the Washington rumor mill focused its attention on the vacancy created at Assistant Secretary of Energy for Defense Programs when Alfred Starbird retired.

The appointment takes on special significance because that officer becomes the highest ranking official ever to be in charge of nuclear explosives research and production complex. As the old Atomic Energy Commission became the ERDA and then DOE (Department of Energy), the weapons chief had always been one step from the top. But the agency is much bigger now, and an assistant secretary is frequently considered the equivalent in rank of any chief short of a department head.

Unfortunately, most "Congressional sources" aren't even aware at this juncture that an opening exists at energy. None of the usual groups have any candidate in mind. One dovish source did acknowledge their interest would be in seeing that Energy Secretary James Schlesinger does not use the appointment as a way to get his foot into the door to defense policy making. That group prefers to leave that area to Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

One question surrounding the thought is whether it will go to a civilian or military person. Starbird, the first and only person to hold the equivalent position in ERDA, was a retired general. His predecessors in the AEC were either retired or active generals.

The law holds that the chief of the Division of Military Applications (of nuclear energy), who will report to the assistant secretary, must be an active duty military officer. But there is no such requirement for the assistant secretary.

Energy officials said no decision has been made on the civilian-military issue.

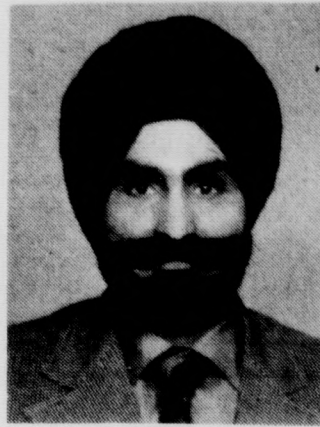

For what it's worth, the name the reporter was mentioning to his sources was Dr. Michael May. After Edward Teller, May is the major national figure at LLL. He has known Schlesinger for years, having served as his representative on the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks negotiating team when Schlesinger was Secretary of Defense. He is also a former director of LLL, a position others have found useful as a stepping stone.

In his current "associate director-at-large" position, May does some consulting for Washington. For example, he co-authored a study submitted to Congress early last year which recommended production of the B-1. However, May is not strongly associated with any particular philosophical faction.

Whoever gets the presidential nod will have to be approved by Senator Henry Jackson's energy committee, which fact makes it a good bet the Administration will not go with a committed dove.

The reporter's sources agreed May is as likely a choice as anybody, which makes him worth a "mention" here at least.

Candidate sees 'concerns' in city future

Gurnam S. Sidhu

LIVERMORE — Gurnam S. Sidhu sees a major concern in the future of the city in development of shopping facilities particularly in the downtown area.

"We are really right for one or two department stores, with our population over 50,000," he pointed out. "We spend more than 60 per cent of our retail dollars outside of Livermore. The city council has never paid adequate attention to our shopping needs."

He feels more concern should be given to having easy access in shopping areas for vehicles in the downtown shopping district. Tied in with this is the parking situation that continues to haunt city government.

"That (older) part of town was not developed for the automobile unfortunately and we now do depend on the automobile," observed the Lawrence Livermore Lab physicist. He feels some parking needs to be developed, "but I don't think the city should do such a super parking lot. They should do just what is adequate."

Sidhu, a naturalized citizen originally from Punjab, emphasized there is a major parking problem for merchants on the north side of First Street, but there are other areas of the downtown district where parking is not such a problem. He noted the city has been studying several plans for parking "and I would not go for the biggest one if I had a choice."

Concerning the shopping facilities, Sidhu recommended forming a Retail Development Committee to research all problems, do attitude surveys and provide information service to make people more aware of the retail problems. "But more importantly, this committee could look into city projects that potentially might harm business," he said. The precedent for such a committee comes from the other 16 appointed citizens' groups that Livermore already has. "This committee is really more important than some other committees and I don't know why it hasn't been done before," he said. He would like to see more work in zoning that would make it less difficult for some retail businesses to operate in the downtown area.

Moving away from retail business, the city council candidate discussed growth control, once a controversial topic here. He feels the moderate two per cent growth designated in the General Plan is good. "Unless there is an overriding consideration for change, that is a good limit," he said.

On industry: "It would be a good thing to have diversity in industry here. I'm not sure the city is realistic in restricting Portola Avenue to residential. The city does not want a commercial strip there, but maybe a nice clean industry would be an asset."

Southern Pacific: "I know a lot of people suffered as a result of the railroad relocation. I'm not trying to minimize that. I think the city has a chance of benefitting from it, but Southern Pacific has benefited more. They have a policy of not selling land, but they develop it and lease it, which makes it difficult for a major company to come in."

Sidhu warms to the subject of the pipeline, noting, "I'm sure if the pipeline is built and there is no challenge to it we'll have to live with it."

But he adds, "I have more and more evidence that the members of LAVMA did not do their homework, did not pay attention to what was good. They simply accepted the proposals made by the consultants."

Sidhu opposes the route of the pipeline, and feels the route down the canyon would have been better. He said he asked LAVMA members at the last meeting for figures on cost difference of the proposals and they could not give them.

The father of two sons and a daughter, his wife also is active in the community as a member of the school board. He feels it would be good to have some technical ability on the LAVMA board. "Technical ability would not be bad when you're dealing with technical things and I think the city of Livermore would benefit if it has some technical person on the council."

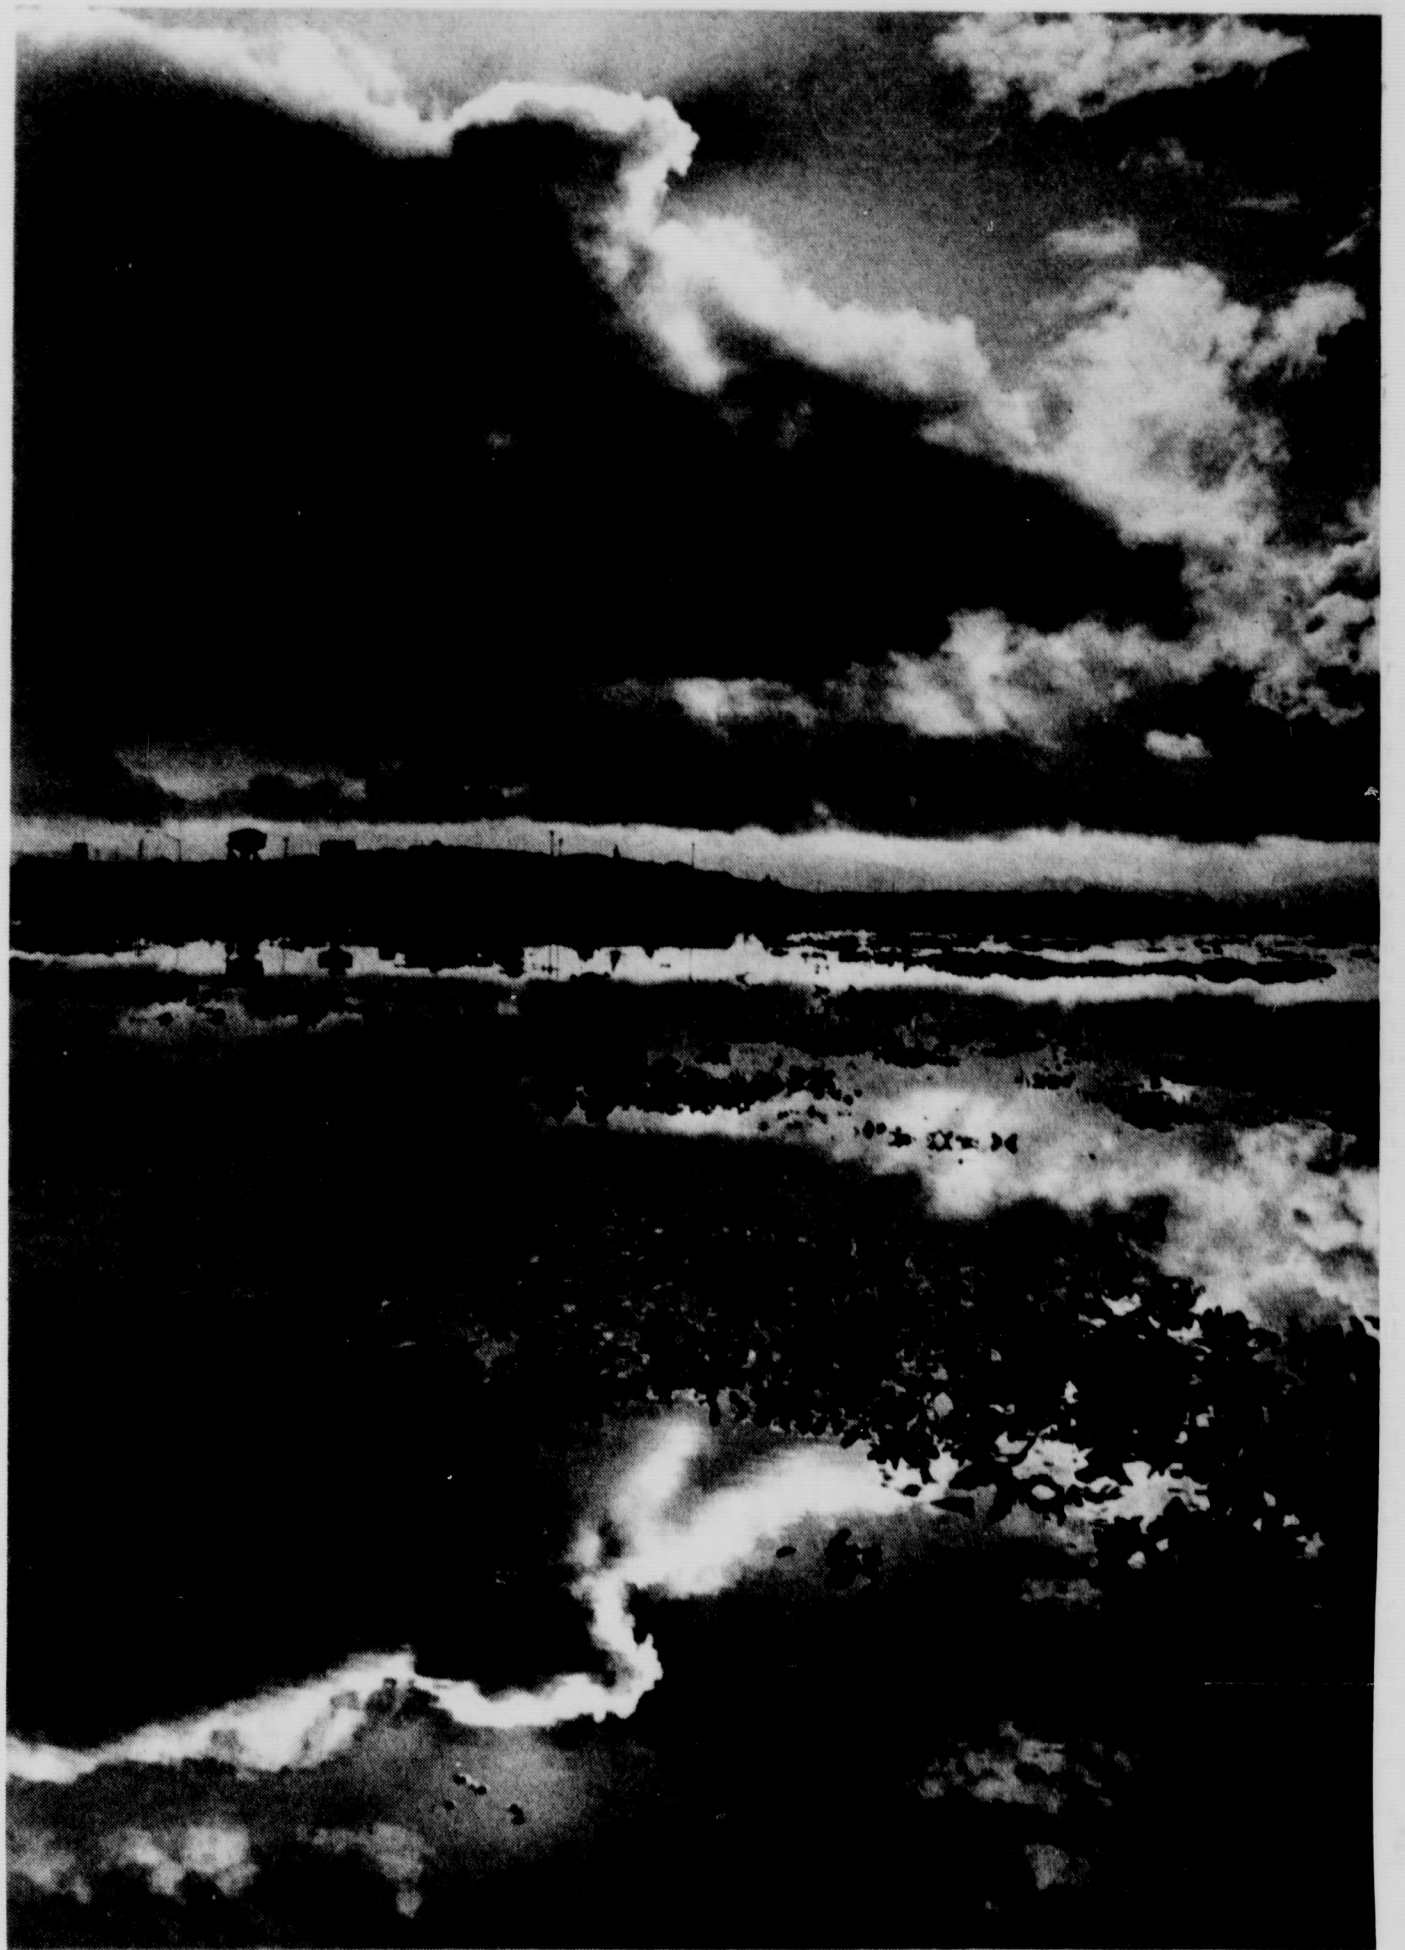

On the vote: "They either should not have had a vote, if they really wanted to go to suit it would have been less of a violation of principle. But once they took the vote they should not have turned around right away and said they were going to do it this way."

On the Civic Center: "It is not hard to get money for projects if they have a good plan. It's not really a problem to have money, it's a problem to have a good product well planned and well presented."

He added, "Over the long term we should push for a system to get more money, which is really our money. Federal money should not be considered an aid, it is our money that is being returned, just like we get the gas tax from the state. But that's long term."

On the elected mayor issue: "Citizens should have the right to elect if they want to, but I cannot promise that this will solve all our problems. I don't think it will hurt anything unless they plan a full-fledged high political mayor with a lot of money behind it."

Storms to continue

The storms came, then fell back, then came on again as the Valley staggered like a drunken, very wet sailor being dealt one blow after another. Tuesday brought one of those brief respites ... sunshine trying to break through the clouds, casting interesting patterns onto flooded fields, as with this scene just off Interstate 580. The forecast? — More of the same.

Elected mayor?

Issue makes ballot

LIVERMORE — The elected mayor's issue will be on the March 7 ballot. The only question so far is whether it will read to elect a mayor and "four councilmen" or a mayor and "four council members."

The semantics situation continued to simmer at Monday night's city council meeting. After an extended discussion of the legality of changing the wording, it was finally decided to let City Clerk Dorothy Hock make the final choice.

It all started last week when the elected mayor petition was submitted and the wording was the old legal term of "councilmen."

JOHNNY WONDER

Kids come up with the darndest questions sometimes, but Johnny Wonder is one place they can turn to get the straight answer. You can learn something every day too, with Johnny Wonder in The Times.

which the city attorney said represented both male and female gender. Mayor Helen Tirsell, somewhat disgruntled by the sexist terminology, urged this week that the larger issue still be the major issue rather than the wording. The committee that petitioned to put the issue on the ballot has requested the wording be changed to read "council members" and that was the wording used in the published notice of intent to put the issue on the ballot.

Councilman Marshall Kamena renewed the issue Monday night when he said he was "nervous" about the random verification method of the petition. The city clerk and city attorney assured the council the random check of petition names was authorized by a new state law and was a timesaver.

He then questioned the legality of changing any grammar or punctuation in the petition to be put on the ballot. Both words cannot be used on the ballot, and the decision is yet to be made whether voters will read "men" or "members" on election day. Noting her four years on a male-dominated city government, Livermore's female mayor wryly noted the original wording, "I'm very cognizant of the fact that this is a very common oversight."

Student test scores improve

LIVERMORE — Improved scores in reading, English usage and mathematics were the results of the second phase of student achievement tests shown to trustees of the school district here last night.

Earlier, Livermore Valley Unified School District superintendent Leo Croce announced he was "very pleased" with the overall results of the tests given each year to students in grades 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10.

Livermore students ranked consistently above the national average in all subjects and in all grades tested. Students' scores were equally divided between math and reading, both above average and while language use also rated slightly above national norms, it was the area needing the most improvement.

At the board's request scores for Spanish sur-named students were compiled both as part of the district totals and as a separate category. While this group was relatively small it scored close to the national average in all skills in grades 2 and 10 but apparently fell short in grades 4, 6 and 8 and remained behind the district overall.

"Chances are, if they were compared with their own ethnic group (nationally) they would score quite high," Croce said. Croce and district testing director Dick Jenkins pointed out the the tests measured each skill thoroughly and the scores indicated both how students ranked in relation to the rest of the country and how well they answered the questions.

"If you ask, 'Do the kids put out if they reach the 99 percentile (the highest score possible)'—they do,"

Jenkins said. According to the report, for the period 1975-77 overall improvements were noted in grades 2 (up 5.3 percent), 4 (1.3 percent) and 8 (1.3 percent) while declining scores were noted in grades 6 (down 2 percent) and 10 (1.3 percent). However, all remained above the national average.

Jenkins noted this was the second year the district used the NTBS which cut the chances of statistical error and would help comparison with the state-required California Assessment Program which the scored similarly.

Responding to a question from trustee Jan Brice, Croce said parents and students would have the results explained in teacher conferences at their schools.

Tape sorting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government this week is beginning the tedious task of sorting through former President Richard Nixon's Watergate tapes and papers to make them available eventually to the public.

The Supreme Court ended a long legal fight over the materials last summer by awarding custody to the government. They were stored at a National Archives warehouse last Aug. 9 — coincidentally the third anniversary of Nixon's resignation.

But the government only began inventory of the 1,800 boxes of papers and 1,146 reels of tape recordings on Monday, as stipulated in a federal law that sets guidelines for their public access.

Annigoni's portraits in special area showing

Pietro Annigoni, described by some critics as "the world's greatest portrait artist," traces his origins to Livorno, the home of his mother.

On Friday, Jan. 20, 8 p.m. to 10 p.m., there will be a showing of prints and slides of his work, as well as three originals, on view to the public at State Savings and Loan Association, 999 East Stanley Blvd. presented by Livorno Art Association.

The art association's board decided to sponsor the showing as a cultural enrichment offering for the citizens of Livorno. There is no admission fee, and refreshments will be served.

Annigoni was commissioned to do a portrait of Queen Elizabeth, and became world famous as a result when the painting "created a sensation."

Subsequent commissions to do royal portraits brought more fame. His portraits sell for $200,000. He painted coronation portraits of the Shah of Persia and his queen, as well as portraits of Pope John, Winston Churchill, the late presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, and has turned down painting the portraits of Elizabeth Taylor and J. Paul Getty, as he didn't find their characters "interesting."

Born in Milan, Italy in 1910, Annigoni had his first exhibition of drawings in Florence, after two years of study at the Academia di Belli Arti in that Italian city, known for its art and artists. Then in 1932, his first exhibit of drawings and paintings was held at the Gallery of Palazzo Feroni in Florence.

The prints which will be exhibited have been loaned by Professor Maria Haynes of California State University in Chico, who has previously loaned them to that institution, and the California State University in San Francisco. She felt that Livorno would be most appropriate for an exhibit of the prints, because Annigoni's mother was born in Livorno, and was homesick for the town all her life, after leaving as a bride to live in Italy.

Her name was Theresa Botti. Relatives remaining in Livorno are the Gandolpho family. The artist expressed pleasure when told that there would be an exhibit of his work in his mother's hometown.

"My mother had been born and brought up in California. My father brought her to Italy as a bride, but English was Theresa Botti's language, and she felt a foreigner in Italy. She longed inconsolably for California."

"On a visit to my unmarried cousins in Livorno I was shown the house in which my mother spent the happiest years of her life. A little, well-preserved old house, standing alone in a field. It looked like the heroine's house in a Hollywood 'Western.'"

Although Annigoni is best known for his portraiture, the most famous portraitist of our times, the artist's special concern, according to Professor Haynes, is with religious themes, and society.

Annigoni's altar paintings and frescoes grace churches in Italy and England. His works are exhibited in Tokyo, London, Johannesburg, Tehran, New York. There were charter flights from England to Milan for one of his exhibitions, and a book was written analyzing one Annigoni painting, "The Sermon on the Mountain." The Livorno Library is trying at this time to obtain a copy of his autobiography.

The Annigoni prints are on display now at State Savings and Loan, the 40 loaned by Haynes and on Jan. 20 there will be two oil paintings he did as a twelve year old, and a watercolor he did of a relative's house near Livorno.

A viewing area will be set aside for slides to be shown for the evening showing, and there will be books on display concerning the artist.

His portraits appeared on several Time Magazine covers, including one of Princess Margaret, as well as other famous people. However, his covers met with mixed response. His portrait of Kennedy on a 1962 Time cover engendered from one reader, the response, "The artist who did that should be boiled in his own oils."

'Cadillac' play to be presented

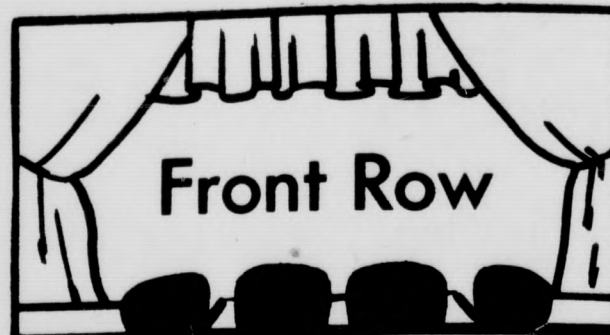

"The Solid Gold Cadillac" will be presented by Woodminster Theater in the sanctuary of the First Presbyterian Church of Livorno, Fourth and L streets, Saturday, Jan. 21 at 8 p.m.

Tickets are on sale at the church office, 2020 Fifth St., Livorno, or they may be purchased at the door. Prices are $4 for adults and $2.50 for children 12 years old and younger. Refreshments will be served in the Fellowship Hall following the play.

Departing from its past presentations of musical comedies, Woodminster will present the Howard Teichmann and George S. Kaufman play as a straight comedy.

"The Solid Gold Cadillac" is a fairy tale about a woman's battle against big business and politics. The play is suitable for the entire family.

IT PRESENTS A GOOD DEAL OF LAUGHTER

"Present Laughter," one of Noel Coward's best comedies, opened to a packed house and appreciative audience at Civic Arts Repertory in Walnut Creek Friday night.

The production opens the Civic Arts Repertory season and if the premiere is any criteria, theater-goers are in for an outstanding season of comedy and drama.

There is not a weak link in "Present Laughter" with performances being uniformly "good" to "excellent."

Valley stage aficionados still have plenty of time to travel down Highway 680 to see the show. Performances are scheduled Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and again next week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Tickets may be reserved by calling the Civic Arts box office, 1641 Locust, Walnut Creek.

The Herbert Ross film "Turning Point" could produce several academy award nominations, including "Best Actress" for Shirley MacLaine.

Miss MacLaine is cast as Deedee in the film dealing with ballet and the career choices two women make. The other woman in this case is Emma, played superbly by Anne Bancroft.

Deedee has chosen to leave the ballet to raise a family while Emma remains single, carrying on her career as a principal ballerina.

Leslie Browne is cast as Miss MacLaine's daughter and rising young ballet star. She is also catalyst for the conflict that develops between the two women, which surfaces via one of the great dramatic scenes of the past year—in a lounge off the main auditorium—and then continues outside in a slam-bang fight between the two.

The film features artists of the American Ballet Theatre, principally Mikhail Baryshnikov (who is Miss Browne's love interest), and many scenes from principal productions.

For the ballet enthusiast, the film will be like a homecoming. It is well done technically and, in the American Ballet Theatre, one can see possibly the best ballet company in the western world.

The company is coming to the War Memorial Opera House in San Francisco Feb. 20-26, incidentally.

"Turning Point" features several fine supporting performances, including those of Miss Browne, Tom Skerrit as Miss MacLaine's husband, and Martha Scott as the rather overbearing ballet company director.

The Livorno-Amador Symphony's second concert of the season is scheduled Sunday, Jan. 29. There'll be an afternoon performance (3 p.m.) at California High School and evening performance (7:30 p.m.) at Livorno Presbyterian Church.

Winners of the youth concerto contest will be featured.

She's the international spark behind AAUW

Kim Kerr is just one of the reasons why the American Association of University Women have it all together in the international relations department.

Kim, who was born in Vietnam, has helped put together the huge AAUW multi-cultural festival, to be held this Saturday, Jan. 21 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Veterans Building, Fifth and L Streets, Livermore. There is no admission, just a 10 cent charge for samples of all the international foods.

After rounding up representative of the American Indian, Filipino, Greek, Polish, Vietnamese and other cultures, Kim will also be helping to make some of her own native foods

"It was difficult for Vietnamese to go abroad" in that era, she adds. "I learned French waiting for a chance to get out."

She got a job teaching French literature when she "found out about the conditions in the orphanages" and began working in the school-factory.

"Growing up in a country torn by war had its affects — culturally and economically — upon Kim's family, she recalls.

Families living in the big cities, such as Saigon, did not see the direct effects of the fighting as much as those in the countryside, Kim says. "It was indirect — having a brother who has to be enlisted, or losing a close friend," says Kim. "A couple of times, I saw the fighting up close," she adds, "but we were kind of prepared for that sort of thing." A major problem, she says, was constant fear of hunger: "We were afraid of not enough food to eat. We always stored things up."

The people in Saigon, she adds, "were not aware of the American presence (in Vietnam) until quite late." In the countryside, she says, "there was hostility" towards Americans. "People could not understand that kind of war," Kim says, "and why the Americans were there."

Kim's parents had a rubber plantation which was destroyed during the 1964 bombing. So, without a means of income, Kim and her sister took up teaching to support the family.

It was through that teaching she met Clark Kerr Jr., son of the former University of California at Berkeley regent and president. "I was helped by the Quakers" at the school, she says, "and my husband happened to be working with the American Quakers." The two spoke French to each other in the beginning, and the situation was not that easy. "Normally, a girl in an Oriental country would not marry outside her culture," she says. "It's been like that, and it's still like that."

In the old days, she explains, "the family arranged the wedding." Usually, however, the woman "had the right to say no" is she didn't care for the man, Kim laughs. But "a girl is a threat in a family if she's not married," Kim says.

Kim says at first her family was "shocked" that she wished to marry an American. "They thought I should change my mind" and they didn't like the thought of her moving out of the country, she explains.

Finally though, the family gave its blessings and also gave the couple a wedding ceremony. Kim left Vietnam then, and "thought it would be years before I would see them again."

The war, again, changed their lives. Many members of the family came to the United States at the very end of the war, when many were being evacuated from the country.

Kim finds life in the United States a great learning experience, she says, though she laughs when she remembers certain things. "I can't get used to cleaning the house," she says with a grin. "In Asia, even people who aren't rich have help. Here, you cannot afford that."

Now a member of the AAUW board, Kim is the mother of a daughter, Kimi, age 6. And, she's acting as the international relations representative for the Multi-cultural festival.

With her international outlook, Kim seems to be just the person for the job.

for the event so that area residents can sample them.

Fluent in French, Vietnamese and English, and knowledgeable of a smattering of German, Kim has been learning the ways of a new culture since she moved to the United States in 1970 with her husband, Clark Kerr Jr., who she met in her native land. "I was directing a school and a toy factory in Saigon," she says. She takes out a variety of puzzles and colorful items and places them on the living room coffee table.

"We made toys to sell, and with that profit we ran the school," which was a "small one-room classroom" for poor children in the city, Kim says.

Kim grew up in the city with the continuing presence of the war which ravaged her country. "The war had been affecting us since I was born," she says. "I didn't know anything else."

She was ambitious, and determined to become a scientist, perhaps studying in a European country. But, she says with a smile, "your life changes from one day to another."

CPR — how to save a life three easy lessons

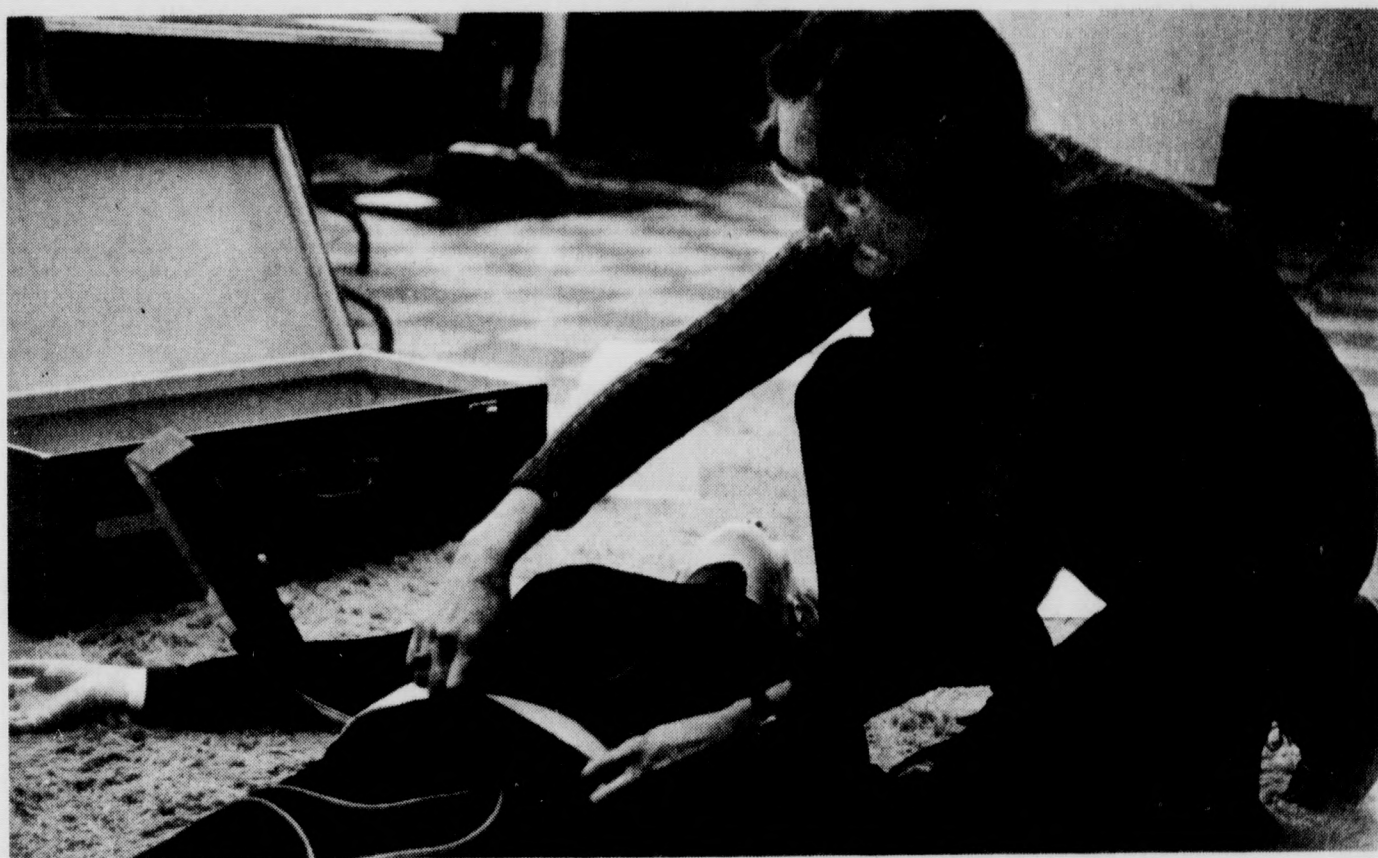

It's easy. It's something everybody should know. And it could save someone's life.

"It" is cardiopulmonary resuscitation, better known as CPR among health services people. Though it's got a complex name, CPR is a technique that more and more people are learning these days — and you don't have to have a college degree to understand it.

The CPR will be offered as a course for the first time in Pleasanton beginning tomorrow, Jan. 19, under the auspices of the American Red Cross, the Pleasanton Fire Department, the Pleasanton Junior Women's Club and the local Department of Recreation and Human Resources.

A free "Emergency Response" class is the first in a series of first aid classes being offered locally. And specialized CPR classes, scheduled both morning and evening, will also start Jan. 23 (See box for more information).

CPR, according to Sue McAllister, a local CPR instructor, is simply a matter of trying to restore pulse and breathing to a person who has had a heart attack or accident.

Dolores Bengtson illustrates life-saving methods on Record-a-Annie.

According to the Red Cross, it is a highly effective method of working with people who could otherwise end up on the fatality list because they don't get immediate medical aid.

"People are realizing the importance of getting immediate help," says McAllister. And more people, she says, are signing up for CPR and first aid classes so they can cope with a life-threatening emergency.

"You need to learn the fundamentals of CPR" in a class, McAllister adds, because CPR is administered differently depending on the situation. "It really takes practice to apply the technique," she says — but once learned, it can be invaluable.

The basic steps in CPR are simple, McAllister says. If you see someone fall with a heart attack — or through an accident — "look and listen," she says, by checking for breathing. Tip the head back to clear the air passageway which could be blocked by the tongue. Then locate the pulse of the person, either in the wrist or the large artery of the throat.

If you've witnessed a person's actual heart attack or accident, then act fast, McAllister says. "Getting the person to an emergency facility within one hour after the onset of symptoms," she adds, could mean a 90 percent change of saving their life.

CPR classes will teach exactly how to administer the special hard thump on the chest which can get the electrical impulses in the heart going again.

Then, it's time to administer actual CPR, which consists of 15 compressions on the chest — hard ones — followed by two short breaths into the victim's mouth.

"Two people," says Dolores Bengtson of the Recreation Department, "do it more efficiently" simply because it can be an exhausting technique. "I've taught many classes," Bengtson says, "but I haven't flunked anybody yet. Sometimes, though, they get frustrated."

CPR classes, Bengtson adds, are taught with the assistance of a rather amazing helper called Record-a-Annie, a plastic dummy with a built-in computer. While participants practice their technique on Annie, lights will tell him or her if the compressions are hard enough, and in the right place. And, a computer tape comes out of the $1300 dummy to actually chart the rescuer's performance in all the different areas of the life-saving technique.

Her chest rises and falls with each breath, and her eyes dilate when a light is shined in them, just as in humans.

Other materials used in the class, which are supplied by the Red Cross, include Resusci-Baby, a small baby doll which also can be used for CPR practice, and several chest model dolls with "very human-like construction," Bengtson adds.

All of this equipment, she says, will help to "give people a learning technique they can use" in case of a serious situation. The practice lessons will give participants "an accurate measure of their performance." And that, Bengtson adds, could make it easier to "have confidence" if you're faced with saving a life.

CPR classes

"Emergency Response" classes will be offered in Pleasanton Jan. 19 and Feb. 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cultural Arts Center, 4477 Black Ave.

The free classes will introduce residents to safety services available in the community, and will teach families about the variety of smoke alarm systems. And a first aid/CPR instructor will show films on technique and demonstrate mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

CPR classes specializing in the technique will be held in both the morning and afternoon beginning Jan. 23. Day classes are 9 a.m. to noon, Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. Evening classes are 7 to 10 p.m., Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. Materials fee is $3.

Classroom

News of the Murray School District

(Classroom is a monthly feature in The Times and features news of the Murray School District. The news release is prepared by the Murray district offices and run in addition to another monthly feature, Kids Corner, featuring stories, poems and drawings of Murray students.)

The libraries in the Murray School District function to support the curriculum goals as well as to encourage children to use books and other materials for personal enjoyment. The libraries in the district have many of the same basic services: circulation of books and audio visual materials, helping students with research, and individual or group instruction in the use of the library. In addition, each school library has special features tailored to the school program and students.

CRONIN SCHOOL

Cronin School has two libraries, one in the center of each pod. Until the first of the year, they also had two library media aides, but Delores Brown, the library media aide in the upper grade pod, has gone in an educational leave for a year. The lower grade pod is under the direction of Wanda Bristow, who has particular skills in storytelling and dramatics.

In teaching library skills, she uses puppets and had continuing characters who lead the children through the maze of library skills. A new feature in the lower grade pod is the permanent learning centers in science, mathematics, social studies and language arts. These centers consist of a number of materials, such as books, self-correcting dittos the children use, paper, crayons, manipulative materials, and games.

In the language arts center, the children are making their own joke, riddle and cartoon books. In the science center, the children will be studying the solar system and, in the mathematics center, spatial perception this month. There is a new subject area every month. In addition, there is a permanent audio visual center in the middle of the library for listening and viewing. To encourage the children to read for pleasure, there is a treasure chest filled with paperback books. When the children bring a book back that they have read, they toss a gold doubloon into the treasure chest. Similar centers are planned for the upper grade pod when a replacement for Mrs. Brown is on the job.

DONLON SCHOOL

Donlon School has combined the upper and lower grade libraries and is housed in the upper grade pod. The two library media aides at Donlon are Peggy Rhodes and Elaine Valdez. Students at Donlon are instructed in library skills in small groups.

The children are able to check out cassettes to be taken home and among these are some that have been done by the Donlon band. The Donlon library also has an audio visual center for listening and viewing. The library is a very busy place and has set a record for circulation in the district, having checked out 4,000 books in 16 days.

DUBLIN SCHOOL

Dublin library has received a face lift this year and is now a very pleasant and peaceful setting. The library media aide, Estelle Rash, has been very instrumental in the ITV program district-wide. She has regularly scheduled classes who come in to view educational TV provided by KQED. In addition, she teaches library skills and does storytelling with flannel boards. She is planning to work with the children making filmstrips, puppets, and dioramas using shoe boxes.

FALLON SCHOOL

Fallon library is going to be totally new and when it opens, it will be one of the most modern, well-equipped libraries in the district. Instead of the small library in the administration building, it is now two classrooms in the "C" wing. According to library media aide, Diane Sexauer, plans are to have the library open within the next two weeks, with an evening opening for parents and community. One feature of the library will be a special collection of adult books on parenting that will circulate to parents and others in the community.

FREDERIKSEN

Frederiksen is still in the process of reorganizing, having become a junior high library. The newest library media aide in the district, Vivian Roberts, is coping with problems that go along with a school that is still in the process of being remodeled. Classes of various kinds are still held in the library and probably will be until the end of the year.

Nevertheless, students are using the library for study, checking out books, and are even getting some instruction on library skills.

LYDIKSEN SCHOOL

Lydiksen library has a new feature this year, the "Reading Corral," which is a very popular place with children. It is a comfortable corner with pillows where children can read quietly and comfortably. In addition, they are getting new viewers for their audio visual center, which is also very popular with the children. Lydiksen also has ITV from KQED in the library. A popular feature at Lydiksen library is their "Hit Parade," which is a survey of the most popular books with the Lydiksen children and which changes monthly. A "Most Liked Book Hit Parade" is going to be instituted shortly. This encourages children to read. Doris Borgen, library media aide at the Lydiksen library reports that a Book Fair is being planned for the Open House in April.

MURRAY SCHOOL

Murray School library plans to do a pilot program on ITV. All the rooms are to be wired for ITV cable. The library will be the point from which programming will generate. The video playback in the library will utilize KQED programs, plus videotape from the county. Murray School has one of the largest collections of library books in the district.

The library media aide of Murray, Linda Ferris, is also involved with the ENE program.

NIELSEN SCHOOL

Nielsen PTA recently purchased equipment for the audio visual center of the library including study mates, cassettes, carrels, and curriculum materials. Narpeting has been installed and the library is now one of the largest and best facilities in the district. An author day featuring Gladys Conklin, author of many children's nature books, has been tentatively scheduled for mid-February according to library media aide, Joan Loder.

WELLS SCHOOL

One of the major features of Wells library is the career center, which, in addition to books and some audio visual material, has many, many pamphlets which have been obtained from industry, departments of labor, professional organizations, etc.

Natalogs from junior colleges and technical schools are part of the collection. A series of pamphlet files on different careers is featured. Children sue the career center on their own to find out information about careers they are interested in.

In conjunction with the career center, the Nivil Air Patrol will be putting on a movie and talking to students on Jan. 25, according to library media aide Peggie Dill.

Social Studies Books to be Adopted

Each year the State of California offers a list of new or revised textbooks in particular subject areas for local adoption. This year new social studies textbooks are to be selected. Many publishers have been approved by the state, and from this list local school districts have the challenge of making decisions. An understanding of history, geography, anthropology, economics, political science, and sociology, and how these affect our lives, is the basis of social studies.

The Murray School District, in an effort to establish continuity within its elementary and intermediate schools, selected a committee of teachers to review and recommend the social studies texts to be used in our schools for the next five years.

Each elementary school is represented by a primary and an upper grade teacher. Each of the intermediate schools have their social studies department representatives. This committee has been meeting weekly after school since the latter part of November.

The teachers on this committee would be very happy to receive ideas and comments on social studies texts and programs from parents, students and community members.

Teacher representatives and their schools are:

Paul Rinetti, Wells; Doris Battin and Gary Florio, Frederiksen; Mary Lee Huffman and Mary Burgess, Cronin; Hank Haynes and Carolyn Prevo, Donlon; Judy Milford and Nancy Meyer, Dublin; Bobbie Waters and Mary Jane Hyde, Fallon; Karen Price and Janet Mural, Lydiksen; Ruth Markus, Joyce Wade and Lydis Saavedra, Murray; Mary Switzer, Bob Dias, and Marjorie Scott, Nielsen.

The selection of a new social studies text for the children of the district will have to meet strict requirements set up by the teacher's committee. Some of these requirements are: map skills, research skills, an interesting format and appropriate subject area for a grade level, proper reading levels and evaluation methods.

The committee plans to present recommendations to the school board in early February.

Categories of poems to be considered are:

Free verse, classical forms (sonnet, ballad, villanelle, blankverse), narrative poems, nature poems, and point of view poetry (poems representing contemporary social movements, e.g. women's poetry, civil rights, ethnic poems, etc.).

Contestants are limited to one poem per category.

Short stories are to be from 1,200 to 1,300 words and may be on any subject. Only one story may be submitted by each contestant. A separate entrance fee is required for persons submitting short stories. The fee is $1.

Among the other classes with openings are shorthand, typing, income tax preparation, creative stitching, tidepools, knitting and crocheting, weaving and many levels of sewing, miniature cabinet making (doll house), wood carving, law in layman's terms, stock market analysis, and sales and merchandising. Academic subjects still open are basic mathematics, English for the foreign born, reading improvement, GED preparation and U.S. History I.

Busy Livermore bike path wins county aid

LIVERMORE — The second busiest bike path in northern California will be upgraded, county supervisors decided in Oakland yesterday.

The path, along East Avenue between Livermore and Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, is used by an estimated 600 cyclists a day, most of them traveling to jobs at LLL. That's a fairly large percentage of commuting cyclists among the 6,000 or employees at LLL.

Only Davis, famous for its bike-commuting UC students, has a bike path that is used more, according to a survey by the Alameda County planning department.

Supervisors approved spending $69,000 to build a bike path along the north side of East Avenue. The current two-way path on the south side will be converted to a one-way.

$62,100 of the estimated construction cost will be paid by state money, the remaining $6,900 by accumulated county road funds from the state gasoline tax.

Council OK's solar heat for city offices

LIVERMORE — The city council approved an additional $19,000 for installation of a solar heating system for the administration building Monday night with the hope that the city would be approved for a federal grant to pay for the remaining $94,952.

City Manager Bill Parness voiced his concern about where the city would get the money for its share, since they already are working $500,000 over the budgeted figures for the new administration building.

Although $4,000 of the $19,000 total already has been paid for the cost of the consultants, Interactive Resources, Inc., Parness told council members, "This is difficult to recommend. The money would have to come from our reserves."

He said the solar system has "an awful lot in its favor" and engineers indicate the city can return its investment in 20 years. The system would provide 35 per cent of the heated water and heating needs. Consultants who designed the project estimate a savings of $1,253 in fuel costs in the first year and an increase each year after that as the price of fuel goes up.

Ed Schilling, assistant to the city manager, gave the report to the council. He said the estimated cost of $113,952 was considerably lower than earlier figures, which set the price closer to $146,000. Schilling said the city has a "better than average chance" of securing federal funding with the solar heating proposal.

The grant application being submitted by the city would be for part of $9 million available this year for demonstration projects showcasing solar heating experiments in different kinds of buildings and different climates across the country. Last year 80 similar projects were federally funded. The Livermore plan would include solar heating for the police building, but would not include the new council chambers.

State mental health aid

County hopes for big share

OAKLAND — Alameda County hopes to get a big chunk of the $80 million in mental health funds which Governor Jerry Brown is trying to obtain from the state legislature. Supervisor Fred Cooper reported yesterday.

Cooper and county mental health officials participated in a two-hour conference call with the governor. The result is hope for getting a good share of the money.

Alameda, Los Angeles and San Diego counties are woefully underfunded, said Cooper. It's not clear whether Brown will divide the money on a per capita basis throughout the state or will distribute the bulk of the money into the neediest counties.

The supervisors will keep the pressure on Brown through the county's legislative advocate and the local assembly and senate members.

Dr. Shirley Mandel, the county's mental health leader, gave her view of the conference call with the governor: "He is saying, 'I want to give you this money and I want good press.' Whether he is around after a couple of years to see the program through is a moot question."

She was alluding to Brown's rumored run for the Presidency in 1980, assuming he is re-elected governor.

With that in mind, Supervisor John George kiddingly told Mandel that she should tell Brown that President Carter plans to visit Alameda County's mental health facilities.

"You're thinking of Billy Carter," said Cooper.

"Yeah, he's coming out to be locked up," shot back George to the laughter of nearly everyone in the supervisors' chambers.

Cooper said that so far Brown has had "bad press" in the Legislature over his proposal for a big funding push on mental health. Legislators said that

Brown repeatedly vetoed their mental health funding bills in earlier years and now suddenly he has discovered mental health as a political issue.

Public housing

Last evening the boards of commissions and staff from Livermore and Pleasanton Housing Authorities had a "social get-together... no business was conducted." We hope the commissioners did not observe that rule so closely that they missed the opportunity to swap shop talk on the potential and the pitfalls of public housing.

Whether it was the misguided management of Livermore's Leahy Square, the up-and-down future of Dublin's Komandorski Village or the malfunctioning alarm system in Pleasanton's Kottinger Place, public housing has not been growing in credibility these last few months.

One of the reasons, we suspect, is that no one — not the public, not the city councils and not even the housing commissioners — really understands what we need to accomplish with public housing. If it is understood, that knowledge most certainly is not widely shared.

The subsidized housing needs of this suburban scene are unique... relating largely to senior citizens rather than to the sick or the indigent. But is that the way the local housing authorities see their role? And does the public understand that mandate?

It is time for public housing to come out of the closet and into sharp focus with a clear enunciation of what it's all about, in our town.

Laws, lobbyists

We hear a great deal these days about the abuses of a few powerful lobbyists who seek to influence legislation of particular interest to their constituency.

We should be paying more attention to the successes of "bona fide" lobby groups whose efforts are constant, persistent and apparently quite rewarding.

Information coming out of Sacramento this week advises us it is public employees and their hired representatives who have the biggest impact on our legislators. Nor does that effort stop with lobbying.

In 1976 the California State Employees Association made nearly $460,000 in political contributions at the state level. California Teachers Association contributed $392,592 and the California School Employees Association another $176,000 to candidates favorable to their cause.

All told, public worker organizations spent $3.7 million in efforts and campaigns directed at law makers in the 1976-77 sessions.

True, the biggest spender of all is still the business sector which poured $17.8 million into its political effort over that two-year period.

But there is something a little frightening in the picture of tax-supported workers taking a healthy slice of their earnings to influence legislators who often set the wage scale and the working standards for those same public servants.

All of which makes us wonder who lobbies for the ordinary taxpayer slob who wants nothing more than a fair shake from his government.

Stray dogs

Editor, The Times:

In the letter from Heather and Heidi Haugen... on the subject of stray dogs, I, also wish that owners of dogs would be more considerate of other people in letting their dogs run wild & injure & destroy at will. Not only does this show lack of consideration of others but the dog itself is endangered and anything can happen to it...

I would like to say a word to Heather whose pets were destroyed. It seems you had no fence or not an adequate one or the dogs could not have gotten in your yard. These poor little pets were not properly protected in an open yard. Yes, your four year old sister should also have a tight fence to play behind out of danger.

Editor, The Times:

The Children's Emergency Council wishes to extend their sincere appreciation and thanks to all the Dublin/San Ramon churches, local organizations and numerous individuals who gave monetary support, food, clothing and their time to help make Christmas 1977 a happy and joyous one for those less fortunate.

The monetary support and food donations were great and will enable the Council to give much needed assistance to families throughout 1978.

We especially want to thank the Valley Times for their cooperation and excellent coverage provided the Council.

We thank each and everyone who helped in any way. The cooperation of the community increases every year and this is because of caring individuals.

Editor, The Times:

Through the columns of your newspaper, let me express the appreciation of the Salvation Army to all of the residents of this community who helped bring a happy Christmas to the many needing assistance this season.

In addition to its ongoing programs and activities year round, The Salvation Army intensifies its efforts at Christmas to meet very special needs unique to the poor, the homeless, the hungry; to people in prisons and those on military duty. It provides toys and Christmas parties for children; dinners for those down on their luck; visits invalids and elderly, and the lonely who might not be remembered at Christmastime.

These programs... this caring... are made possible by people who give and support the ministry of The Salvation Army. Because the residents of this area have again demonstrated their concern and thoughtfulness for their fellow men and women, I extend my deepest thanks and that of the local Salvation Army Committee.

Hindsight/Foresight

A chance for arts

There is still plenty of hope for a small auditorium or meeting hall being built in Pleasanton that could accommodate theatrical productions.

What it will take, besides time, is a concerted lobbying effort on the part of Valley residents who would like to see such a facility constructed.

Best prospect for an auditorium/hall of sufficient size to house little theatre productions, music recitals, films and lectures, is the proposed Stoneridge Shopping Center, planned for the vast area in the angle formed by Highway 580 and Foothill Road.

An alternate possibility, though plans already drawn and approved would have to be altered, is the Pleasanton Civic Center addition planned for the center on Bernal Avenue.

The city is presently accepting bids for this project and, if all goes according to schedule, a bid will be awarded at either the council meeting of Feb. 14 or 28 and work begun in early March.

Tentative completion date is mid-July. The project includes a meeting room, primarily for council and commission gatherings, with a raised area at the front. The traditional railing separating the audience from the front will be removable and there'll be track lighting fixtures and a "good sound system." But permanent seating will accommodate just 80 and temporary seating 20, for a total of 100 — about 100 to 150 short of what a small theatre or hall should have.

The alternative, then, for those interested in seeing an auditorium or hall being built that could accommodate the arts, is to immediately press for increased capacity and/or lobby for inclusion of a facility at the Stoneridge center.

The City of Pleasanton is in a difficult position as far as the center is concerned.

It would not be advisable for them to take any actions now that might delay, complicate or adversely affect the shopping center project.

The center has been in various stages of talking and planning for several years.

Any more hurdles and delays and the Taubman Co. could well put the whole project on the "back burner" indefinitely.

We are personally aware of City Manager Clay Brown's interest in having such a facility (auditorium/meeting hall) for advancement of the arts built. But Brown, in tandem with the council, must take care of "first things first."

And Stoneridge is certainly one of the latter.

This does not rule out future consideration of a "Willows-type" (Willows Theatre in The Willows-Concord center) auditorium in the Stoneridge Center.

We have been told by one Taubman official that it is still possible to incorporate such a facility in the first phase.

No one with Taubman or the city need be reminded that previous centers initiated by the company include large meeting halls and auditoriums (Southland in Hayward and Eastridge in San Jose).

Without meaning to rock the boat, we urge that Taubman and city leaders get together in the next couple of months to consider altering plans and specifications so that a small auditorium be placed in first-phase development of Stoneridge.

We would also suggest that Valley patrons of the arts (drama, music, painting, film and lecture) express their interest via letter or personal contact with city leaders.

This is an opportunity to provide the entire Valley with a year-round forum for the arts.

Birth certificates

By Charles Bosdet
Capitol News Service

Sacramento — Public reaction to a new state birth certificate has been variously described as "minimal" and like "World War III."

The new, expanded form, which went into effect January 1, requires from two to three times the paperwork formerly necessary and asks questions some mothers are refusing to answer on the grounds they are an invasion of privacy.

"They (the public) don't like it," a Sacramento nurse, who asked not to be identified, related. "They figure the state's getting a little too cotton pickin' nosy, and I sort of agree with them."

Most of the staff, she added, seems to agree with them, too.

The new certificates require information including the parents' education and ethnicity; their occupations; the number of prenatal visits to a doctor; the weight gain during pregnancy; whether the fetus was monitored electronically or by other methods, and more questions regarding complications of pregnancy and birth.

The state Department of Health moved quickly to delete a question which asked the mother to specify how many "pregnancy terminations," before and after 20 weeks' pregnancy, she had undergone.

Civil rights and women's groups, accompanied by individual citizens, rallied against the propriety of such a question. The department quickly advised hospitals statewide to delete the question.

Congressional reform

In spite of promises from Democratic leaders a year ago, major Congressional reform measures still await action as the 95th Congress begins its second session. When the House and Senate return to Washington on January 19, supporters of three key measures will press for early action on the bills:

— Partial public financing of general election campaigns for the House will be sought via a floor amendment in the House. The aim is to establish the system in time for the November elections;

— A bill to provide the public with basic information about the activities of lobbying organizations is ready for what supporters hope will be speedy committee approval and floor action in both houses; and — Legislation requiring public financial disclosure by top officials in all three branches of government has passed the Senate and awaits action by the House Rules Committee.

"Congress got off to a good early start last year by passing strong new codes of ethics — and then bogged down. Their commitments to restore confidence in government are at stake," Common Cause President David Cohen has said.

"The ethics codes were only the important first step," Cohen points out. "Powerful special interest groups can still buy legislative favors and influence with large campaign contributions... and now some members are even backtracking on the ethics codes, attempting to water down the financial disclosure bill."

they won't provide financial support for his personal project of opposition to the Panama Treaty he won't support anymore GOP fund raising is akin to the rich neighborhood kid who, if he can't be captain of the team, will take his ball and bat and go home. It was just that attitude which cost the Republicans the last Presidential election. For it is crystal clear that had Reagan campaigned for the GOP Ford would still be in the White House.

In the upcoming gubernatorial primary Reagan has a chance to redeem himself. The Republicans can win the election if they unite behind a candidate that appeals to the Democrats. Ronnie is bitter about San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson who campaigned against him in 1974. He is peeved at Attorney General Evelle Younger who struck with Ford. But what about Assemblyman Ken Maddy who loyally championed Reagan all through the 1974 GOP National Convention?

True, Maddy is not a right wing conservative in the mold demanded by Henry Salvatori and other king makers who formed Reagan's "kitchen cabinet." But, then, neither was Reagan as it turned out. What is important is that Maddy is what he seems to be, a moderate with an appeal to Democratic voters. Even more important is that Reagan owes a big political debt to Maddy which so far remains unpaid. He also owes the Republicans of the state his best efforts, this time for them.

round the town

Estimates are that up to 100 million people saw Super Bowl XII on CBS-TV or heard the game on CBS Radio.

Which really has that network's brass in a dither.

"What were the other 120 million Americans doing that Sunday afternoon and how come we missed them?" Is the question C.B. Ass put to his top brain trust in a Monday morning session.

Given the effort that the network people poured into their "Super Week" one can readily understand why C.B. was disturbed with Monday's evidence that the Columbia Broadcasting System had a pulled no better than 100 million out of a total national market of 220 million viewers and listeners.

"That's only a 45.4 rating on a scale of 100," C.B. pointed out to his distraught brain trust.

"I can't understand it," said Brain No. 1. "We certainly gave Super Week everything we had."

"Yes," agreed Brain No. 2, "from that Friday night two-hour special featuring Billy Carter and a lot of other non-football types, through three hours of great stuff on Saturday, and finally the all-day orgy of pre-game and post-game interviews, guesstimates and winding up with the late-evening replay of the entire thing... I really thought we had something Super for every American."

"Yes," agreed Brain No. 3, "and getting churches all across the land to read the Pope's message of urging 'good football fellowship without undue violence' from their Sunday morning pulpits was a stroke of genius, I thought."

"I'm not interested in your strokes of genius," thundered C.B. Ass. "I want to know why, after laying out $18 million in Super Week Hype, and clearing the world's news wires for this one great event (including convincing Sadat and Begin to call off their scheduled Sunday peace conference) why didn't we score better than 45.4?"

"My cousin, Nonbrain, was one of those who didn't watch the game on CBS-TV," volunteered Brain No. 4. Right away, all eyes, were focused on poor No. 4, menacingly.

"He was on the operating table most of Sunday afternoon... having nonbrain surgery," No. 4 hastened to add. "But the chief surgeon brought his portable radio and they all heard the game on CBS Radio... all except Nonbrain," No. 4 added, sadly. "Had they given him a local anesthetic, my cousin could have enjoyed Super Day along with his surgery."

The startling confession by No. 4 — now a former CBS employee forced out members of the Brain Trust to disclose their knowledge of those Americans who somehow failed to watch or hear any of Super Sunday's offerings.

"I heard of this guy in a rest home," admitted Brain No. 3, "he's deaf and dumb and 104 years old. They weren't going to expose him to any of our Super programming... BUT (Brain No. 3 hastened to add as the tension mounted) we found a former CBS football commentator who understands sign language... and that way the old man got full details right through the post-game wrapup. Unfortunately, he died before we could give him the late-evening replay."

"The Sunday School Class in our congregation had scheduled their annual Born Again Caravan through the wilderness for Sunday," Brain No. 5 reported. "But we put pressure on their parents through their employers who also wanted to buy time on our Super Week Network... we got 70 percent of the kids back in front of the tube just before the kickoff."

"These are nothing but excuses from a bunch of lame Brains who are trying to protect their CB'asses," C.B. Ass. thundered. "There has to be one solid reason why — after two days of televised hype and six hours of pre-game commentary and girlie dances on the sidelines — CBS still lost the attention of 120 million Americans on Super Sunday!"

"I think I know," said a voice from the corner of the Brain Room, and all eyes immediately turned to find THE JANITOR! "One thing I've learned over the years here at CBS is that you can sweep just so much crap into one heap."

And that is why, effective with Super Bowl XII, the entire promotion will be spread over 13 weeks, climaxed with the rising of The Football off of The Kicking Tee on Super Easter Sunday.

EARL WATERS

Reagan

Isn't it about time the Republicans gave Ronald Reagan a good spanking? Certainly he is exhibiting all the earmarks of a spoiled brat.

The point is that Ronnie has a golden opportunity to repay the Republican Party for the honors it has bestowed upon him in making him the governor of the largest state in the nation and a serious contender for the GOP Presidential nomination. But, to date, he has shown no sign of lending his hand to restoring the Party's fortunes in California in the forthcoming elections.

Instead he is continuing to pursue his personal goals and indulging in his love of personal glory by travelling about the country gathering plaudits in the role of the knight in shining armor.

Now it is well known that show biz people tend to be temperamental especially when they get to be stars. The center stage spotlights swell their heads something awful. Of course, Ronnie never was a real star, his movies being more the Class B pix one sees on the late, late movies.

But he did score as the lead in one big hit. It ran eight years in Sacramento. That was after the faded ing actor discovered politics. He stumbled into that, playing the second banana for Barry Goldwater in the 1964 Presidential campaign. He was cast as the clarion of conservatism and developed a speech which caught like wildfire. So successful was it that he gave it over and over in slight variations and it became known as "the speech." Goldwater lost the election but Ronnie came out a hero.

On the heels of that, the lifelong Democrat Reagan, turned Republican overnight, went on to astound the political world by winning election as governor. Whether one believes he was a good governor or not the fact is that the image was good and he built a large following within the state and nationwide which he continues to enjoy.

But it is evident that the ego of the man brooks no concern for others or for his adopted political party outside of what it can do for him. His big fault is that he accepts adulation with no thought of responsibility. He wants the brass ring without paying the admission.

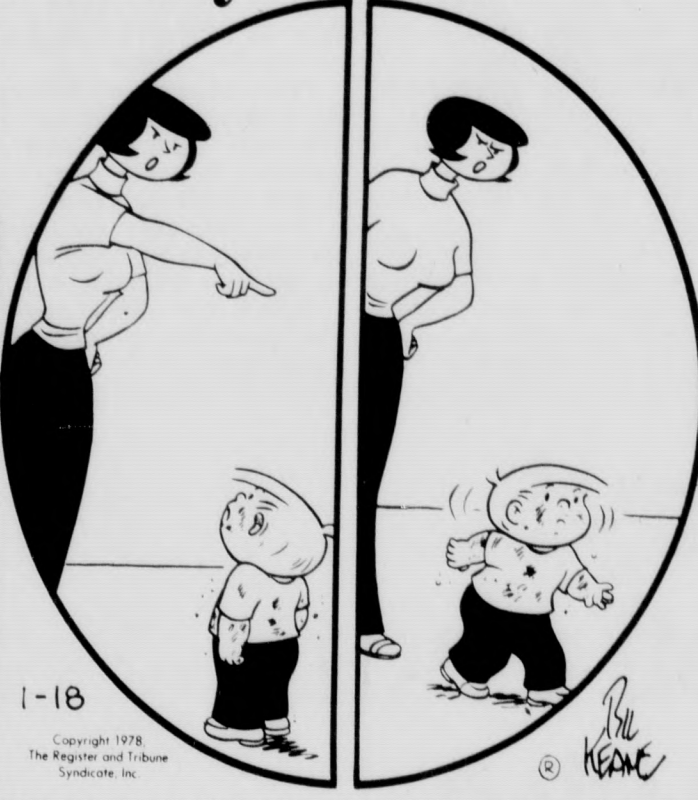

During his time in office the fortunes of the Republicans in California were on the rise. They held every statewide office and captured both houses of the Legislature. But when his eight years was up Ronnie walked away leaving the Party to its fate. There is small doubt that had he turned to with a helping hand in 1974 Houston Flournoy would now be governor.

His recent dictate to the National GOP that if

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I have been married for 14 years to a man I neither love nor respect. He is coarse and mean. Our marriage came about only because my parents arranged it when I graduated from college. They were immigrants and followed traditions of the old country. As a dutiful daughter I felt an obligation to go along with their wishes even though my husband was a business associate of my father and close to his age. I stayed with him for their sake, but now they are both gone and I feel free to divorce him. Yet I have a certain amount of conscience about such a move because of the memories of my parents. Am I doing right? — Y.T.

Dear Y.T.: What you have subjected yourself to for 14 years because of tradition is almost unbelievable. By your actions during your lifetimes you more than proved your respect for your parents. Now it is time to begin thinking of yourself.

Obviously, you are still a fairly young woman. There is no reason that once you are divorced from a man you have never loved, you can't begin a new life.

There is something sad about children who are so bound to their parents that, even in adulthood, they find it difficult to break the bond and live their own lives. In your case, this bond is being carried to an extreme through your compunction to continue your marriage out of respect for your parents.

Learn to live for yourself and make a life that you — and you alone deem appropriate for yourself.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: Three months ago I got my divorce. I really loved my husband and didn't want that to happen, but one thing led to another and we separated. Since the decree became final I have been on a merry-go-round of sex and alcohol. I hate myself for that, but can't seem to break the pattern. I never did this before and it frightens me. What's going on? — I.R.

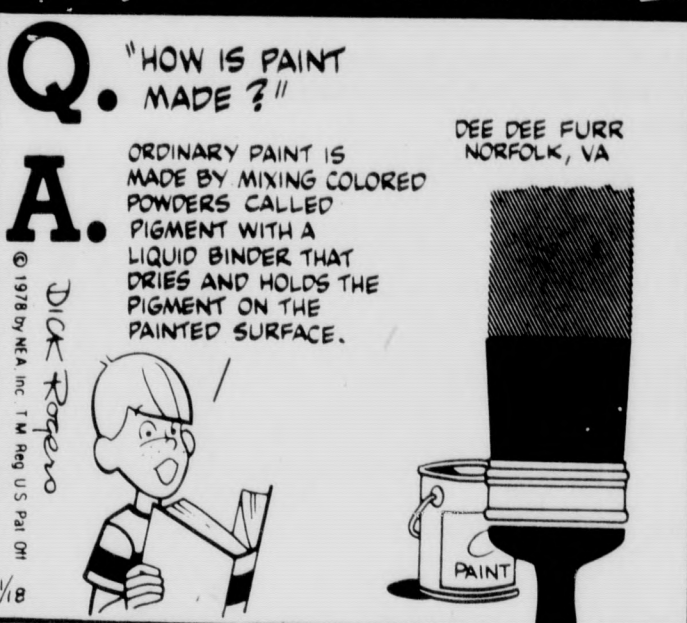

Dear I.R.: Obviously, you're overcompensating for the unhappiness that's suddenly engulfed you. You feel that through making yourself available to one and all you're regaining the love and affection you lost when you were divorced. The traumatic shock you experienced is difficult to understand unless one goes through it. Yet, since the divorce is an accomplished fact, you must face it. A series of men and a succession of alcoholic blackouts are not going to change reality.

You must accept what has happened, plan a new life for yourself and break those habits that are now destroying you. You say, "I never did this before," so there is every reason to expect that this temporary aberration will pass. Try staying at home for a time, and see old friends who can bolster your tattered ego. Above all, seek out more wholesome pastimes that will once again make you a productive and functioning woman.

Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER

Gaily colored paints decorate our homes and protect outdoor surfaces from the weather.

Ordinary house paint is a mixture of colored powders called pigment and a special liquid binder. When the binder dries, it hardens into a tough film that holds the pigment on the painted surface.

To make paint, carefully measured amounts of the paint ingredients are mixed together in a big mixing machine. The mixer mixes the paint materials into a thick paste.

Next, the paint paste is mixed with a liquid called thinner to make the paint easy to brush, spray or roll onto a surface.

Driers and other chemicals are added to make the finished paint dry quickly and to make it suitable for special purposes.

The paint is then strained through filters to remove any solid particles. Now the paint goes to a machine that fills paint cans with the right amount of paint.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D. DEAR DR. LAMB: Last week I was admitted to the emergency room of our local hospital with a problem that was diagnosed as an acute gall bladder attack. While the doctor examined me I pointed out two black and blue spots, one under each arm. I told him I have these occur all over my body every so often and would like to have him check my spleen. He pooh-poohed this idea and said the spleen couldn't possibly be involved. I probably just bumped myself. Well I didn't bump myself and they have appeared between my legs, under my arms and breasts; these areas are difficult to bump.

He's a new doctor and I like him, but it worries me that he wouldn't check it out.

DEAR READER — I wouldn't dare disagree with both you and Marcus Welby. However, your fine young doctor may have done more than you think. A good way to find out if there is a disease present that involves the spleen is to study the blood sample, and I'm sure he took one. The possibility is that if you had a gall bladder attack your liver may not have been functioning normally. People with liver disease often do not produce enough of a substance we call prothrombin which is essential to normal blood clotting.

There is a condition called idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura (ITP) that is treated by removing the spleen in many cases. Dr. Maxwell Wintrobe of the University of Utah, a respected hematologist, states that removal of the spleen in such cases results in a "cure" in about two-thirds of the cases, and "remains the ultimate therapeutic procedure of choice in ITP."

Now I hasten to point out that removing the spleen if you had easy bruising from liver disease or from taking aspirin or any number of other problems would be useless.

Your good doctor probably checked your platelets in your blood sample. These small cells are important in blood clotting and are significantly decreased in patients with ITP.

win at bridge

Vulnerable: both, Dealer: North, Opening lead: Five of clubs.
West North East South
1♥ 2♠ 2♠ 2♠
Pass 3♥ Pass 3NT
Pass Pass Double Pass
Pass Pass

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Even champion players make ludicrous bids at times. Although North-South belong in spades, they arrived at an "impossible" three-notrump contract when South, suffering an aberration of reason, refused to rebid his spades. This hand was played in a high-stakes rubber bridge game at the Cavendish Club in New York City. Three of the four players were former World Champions. The bidding could charitably be called poor, but the play was nothing short of brilliant. After the club opening lead, declarer could count only eight top tricks: six spades (assuming the jack fell), the heart ace and the club ace. One way South might try to make the contract would be to duck the first two rounds of clubs and then win with the ace, hoping West had only three clubs and the ace of diamonds.

If West had this holding, East would have no fast entry for his established club suit, and declarer would scamper home with 10 tricks.

Most players would try to make the contract this way. They would, of course, fail. But South knew the bidding marked East with the diamond ace.

South won the third round of clubs and ran six rounds of spades, carefully watching East's discards. The spade run exerted exceptional pressure on East. When the sixth spade was cashed, East was down to king, queen of hearts, the ace of diamonds and the king, queen of clubs.

East was squeezed. He could not throw the diamond ace because that would set up declarer's king, queen. He could not throw a heart honor because that would establish dummy's hearts.

Thus East threw a club. South led a diamond to East's ace and East could cash only one club trick before conceding the last two tricks to dummy's ace of hearts and king of diamonds.

Fate of 'Family' in doubt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Will "All in the Family" be back next fall? The answers are (a) maybe; (b) maybe not; (c) perhaps with half the cast and a new title, and (d) perhaps as a frequent special.

CBS programs chief Robert Daly says: "We have an option on the show for another year and we're trying to convince the talent to stay." A spokesman said Daly means the entire cast.

But producer Norman Lear, whose hit series began on Jan. 12, 1971, says in a carefully qualified answer the "Family" as we know it is finished because two of its four stars are leaving.

He says Rob Reiner and Sally Struthers are committed to other projects next season, Reiner for ABC and Miss Struthers for CBS.

"And 'All in the Family' to me is that group, that set, that music, that title... we are looking at the last season of all that, and the concluding shows will wrap up all of that," he adds.

CBS, he said, would like to do a half-a-family series next fall with the two other "Family" regulars, Carroll O'Connor and Jean Stapleton, and call it either "Archie and Edith" or "The Bunkers."

But Miss Stapleton isn't signed for either "and I'm not sure Carroll is, although he's indicated interest," Lear said.

"It could happen. I don't know. If the network can't get that, it would like to see six, eight, maybe 10 specials with all four ('Family' stars). That could happen if the other doesn't."

"But the show, 'All in the Family,' with everything it's come to mean, well, we're watching its concluding season now."

What about Daly's statement that CBS is trying to convince all the "Family" talent to stick around for a ninth season?

"Well, all that's true," Lear said. "And as part of that talent, I'm just telling you how I see it." And as he sees it, he reiterated, for the original "Family" this is "definitely its last year."

The landmark series, still drawing big ratings, has made Lear a sitcom king, enabled him to make 15 other network or syndicated comedies from the hit "Maude" to flops like "Hot L Baltimore."

Right now, he says, he's toiling on two more, a CBS pilot called "In the Beginning," about a nun at a storefront mission, and an untitled ABC pilot for a series based on Restoration comedy.

Although he's done movies and says he'll write and direct one seven months from now, half-hour comedies still are his main love.

Why? He says his friends in movies also ask him that.

"They envy me one thing and I envy them another," Lear said. "I envy their opportunity to make love to an idea for several years."

"And they envy me the opportunity to have an idea on the first of September and get it to 40 million people before the middle of November."

When you both work, Try these peachy-keen ideas

Though dining at eight can be delightful, for working couples it's more often just the earliest they can pull the evening meal together. Convenience - packaged foods and fast food outlets offer cooking alternatives, but "cook's night-in" is easier with a weekly menu featuring once-a-week shopping, double-up food preparation and two pairs of willing hands.

Plan ahead and plan big! Cook for four on weekends and freeze the extra servings to heat and serve on busy work days. Buy a large can (always the better buy) of fruit cocktail or cling peaches to star in a sophisticated salad one day and as an easy dessert another.

Baked, poached or broiled, one pound of frozen North Atlantic Cod, Haddock, Ocean Perch, Flounder, Sole or Pollock can go from freezer to table in less than 30 minutes. On the next round, toss the left-over flaked fish in a main dish salad, stir it into a casserole, or combine it with shredded cheese, onion and mayonnaise for a ten-minute oven sandwich on a hefty roll.

FISH SANDWICH

- 1 cup shredded cheese
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons capers*
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon minced onion
- 1/2 pound cooked, flaked North Atlantic fish fillets
- 3 to 4 onion or Kaiser rolls

Stir together cheese, mayonnaise, capers, lemon juice and onion. Fold in cooked fish. Butter rolls and toast under broiler. Place about 1/2 cup fish mixture on bottom half of each roll. Broil until lightly puffed and browned. Top with upper half of roll.

*Pickle relish may be substituted. 3 to 4 Servings.

CHAMPANE COD

- 1 pound frozen North Atlantic fish fillets
- 3 slices lime
- 1 bay leaf
- 1/4 cup butter
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 1/2 clove garlic

Melt butter in cooking/serving dish. Sauté onion until translucent. Add mushrooms and continue to cook until tender. Add reserved fish stock, champagne, salt and nutmeg. Simmer about 10 minutes. Mix cream and flour; add and stir until slightly thickened. Add beaten egg and cook without boiling about 1 minute. Add fish and olives. To serve, place 2 peach halves in sherbet glasses. Place scoop of Peachy Orange Ice on top and pour 2 tablespoons vodka over all. Serve immediately.

Quick Version:

Chop lemon and orange peel with sugar in food processor until fine. Add to peach syrup, orange and lemon juice. Pour into shallow dish or ice cube trays. Freeze until firm. Just before serving place frozen chunks into processor and blend until mushy. Proceed as above. 4 to 6 servings.

Ann Anderson of Dublin, the 1977 Grand Prize winner in the TIMES Favorite Recipe contest.

Recipe contest deadline nears

Last year's winner of The TIMES Favorite Recipe contest swept the competition with the creation "Pear Nut Bread," though at the time her four children did not like it.

Her husband did so Ann Anderson of Dublin tried it out on the judges and was named grand prize winner over 686 other entrants.

This year two awards will be given in each of the eight categories: snacks and appetizers, fruits and vegetables, entrees, breads and sandwiches, microwave magic, cooking for kids and the ever-popular miscellaneous.

Pear Nut Bread won the grand prize last year; this year it is worth $50 and there are $250 in prizes in all.

Entries will be accepted no later than Jan. 26, 1978 and must be sent to P.O. Box 607, Pleasanton, 94506.

Fireworks ban easing with rain

OAKLAND — With all the rain coming down, it looks like Alameda County won't be able to prohibit the sale of fireworks in Castro Valley, Dublin and other unincorporated areas this year, Supervisor Joseph Bort said yesterday.

Using fireworks is illegal, but by a curious paradox its sales have been legal until last year when supervisors drought their sale because of the drought conditions making tinder dry grass susceptible to the Independence Day munitions.

Now that the drought appears broken, the supervisors won't be able to invoke that emergency drought condition, said Bort. Instead, the county will have to concentrate on getting a law passed banning fireworks sales, he added.

Charles Crutten, the county's legislative advocate in Sacramento, said that the state fire marshal may introduce such legislation soon. He did not estimate its chances for success.

'Y' offers new trim courses

Twin Valley YMCA is offering two classes to help get area residents back in shape after the holiday binges.

Ladies Slim and Trim, a physical fitness class, will be offered Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., beginning Jan. 24. The classes, which will be held at the new YMCA complex at 1542 Holmes St., Livermore, will be taught by Lorraine Groeser. Fee for the eight-week series is $16.

Another YMCA fitness class scheduled is yoga, instructed by Lorraine Groeser, features lessons in Hatha Yoga, a combination of physical and mental awareness and control.

The yoga class begins Jan. 25, and continues every Wednesday from 10 to 11:30 a.m. for eight weeks. Fee is $12, and the class will also be conducted at the YMCA offices. For more information, on these classes, call the YMCA at 447-8300.

Genealogy seminar set for Dublin

A seminar including lecture and workshop study in the methods of genealogical research is being presented for the public locally by the Dublin Mormon congregation beginning Thursday.

The quarterly series of seminars for both beginning genealogical students and those with more experience is sponsored by the California Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and will utilize the resources of the church's research library in Oakland which is the world's second largest after the one in Salt Lake City.

The Dublin classes will be held Thursdays from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at 832 Village Parkway and will have five sections; basic genealogy for first timers, a more advanced class emphasizing materials available, family genealogy, a class in specialized research with government documents and a class for foreign research.

The courses are free and scheduled for an extended period.

Knieval to serve a full six months

SANTA MONICA (AP) — Denouncing Evel Knieval as a coward, a judge ordered today that the motorcycle stunt man be required to serve every day of his six-month jail sentence behind bars.

Superior Court Judge Edward Rafeedie, expressing open anger at Knieval's "show business stunts and PR pipe dreams," stared across the courtroom at Knieval and said: "You are in jail, sir."

"You are not Evel Knieval, daredevil. You are Robert C. Knieval, an inmate ... Do your time. Do it with dignity. Obey the rules, and you'll get out."

Rafeedie ordered the county Parole Board not to release Knieval before he has served the full six months of his sentence. The ruling came at the end of a sometimes chaotic hearing in which Knieval volunteered to take a lie detector test to prove he never intended to escape when he returned to jail late from his work furlough.

Rafeedie declined to revoke Knieval's three-year probation and did not specifically rule on whether he had technically escaped from jail.

But he said he felt the county Probation Department should have removed Knieval from a work furlough program long before the escape issue arose. He said such stunts as lining up limousines in front of the prison "serves to inflame the public and discredit a program in which thousands of men have served with dignity."

The judge said Knieval had improperly tried to portray his assault on his former manager as "the act of a heroic avenger."

Turning to Knieval, the judge said: "The act that resulted in your being placed in the County Jail was an act of extreme cowardice, as much as you may persist in the delusion that it was an act of rightful retribution. 'You wronged that man in this case and you did so in a vicious and inexcusable manner,' Rafeedie said of Knieval's Sept. 21, 1977, baseball-bat attack on Sheldon Saltman.

SR district honors high school interns DANVILLE — The San Ramon Valley Unified School District will honor its Executive High School Interns and their sponsors at a special recognition ceremony Thursday, Jan. 26 at district offices.

The ceremonies are scheduled for the district board room from 7 to 9 p.m. Light refreshments will be served.

Natasha Cole is coordinator of the program.

Health stores 'harassed,' says solon

SACRAMENTO — Sen. William Campbell, R-Whittier, has charged the state Department of Health with "harassing" owners of health food stores after a recent investigation cited some operators for practicing medicine without a license, according to a Capitol News Service story written by Dean Tremewan and released last Friday.

Campbell described the health department's probe "an outrageous use of taxpayers dollars to fund undercover efforts to entrap well-meaning business people whose only goal is to help their customers achieve better health," said the CNS story by Tremewan.

The Republican lawmaker announced that he is drafting legislation to amend the government code used by the health department in citing the stores.

The codes make it illegal for unlicensed individuals to administer nutritional programs or provide health care services or advice.

"But," Campbell said, "as it stands now that section of law is so vague that if it is carried out to the letter, I can be prosecuted for telling a friend, 'you look tired, sit down.'"

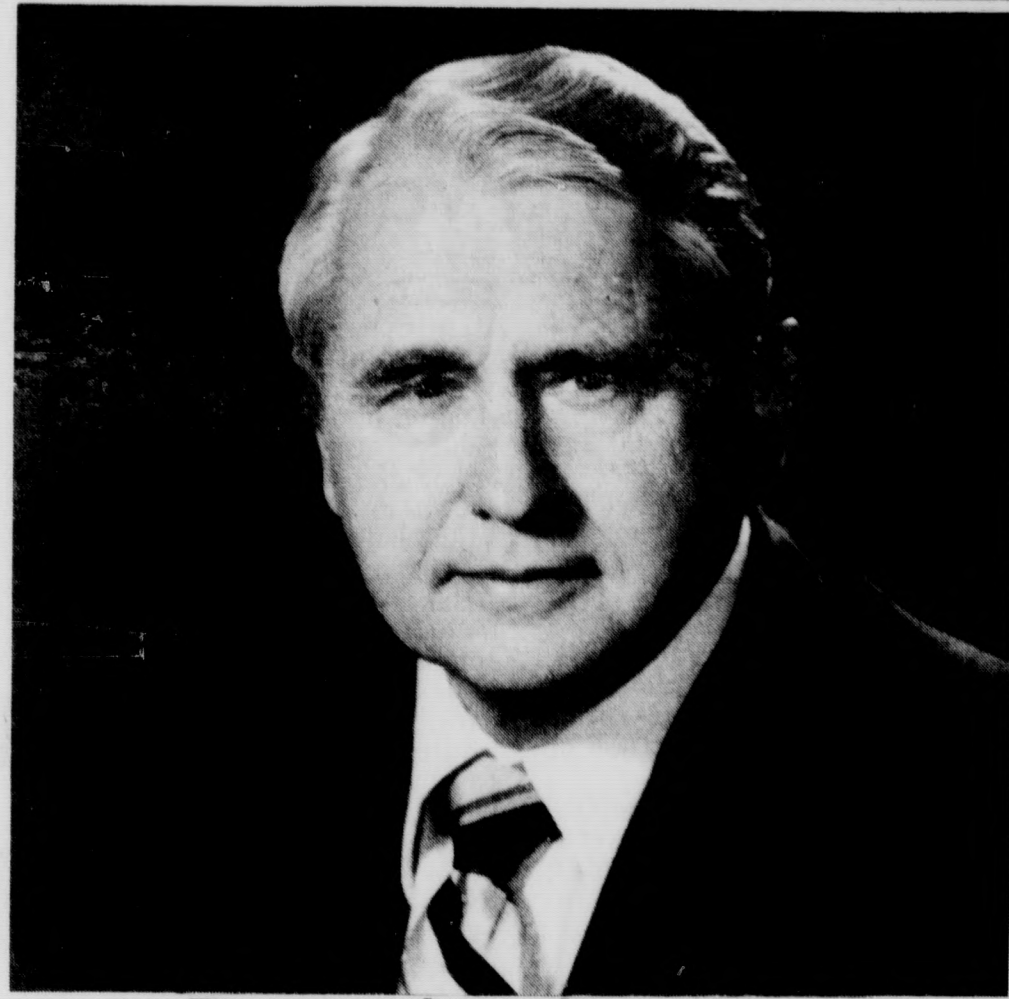

"That advice under the law," he said, "constitutes a prescribed treatment."

Campbell said that California's laws against the offering of nutritional advice prevents a valuable service from being rendered.

"There is no doubt in my mind that while consumers must be protected, we must also insure that when sought, nutritional advice should be available."

Campbell's measure has yet to be finalized, with the state board of Medical Quality Assurance preparing the specific language.

The bill was motivated after a Sacramento area health food store was prevented from opening the doors of her store following the health department's probe.

Davis decides to run

Former Los Angeles Police Chief Edward M. Davis, 61, yesterday made several state-wide stops to announce his long-expected decision to run for governor. He cited a poll showing him less than seven percentage points behind Attorney General Evel Younger for the Republican nomination for governor. "The people like that narrow conservative image," he told reporters in Los Angeles yesterday. "It's narrow enough to give me tremendous room for expansion." Younger and San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson have both been mentioned as GOP challengers to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. Neither has announced his candidacy, although Wilson was expected to declare shortly.

This week named for Jaycees

The week of Jan. 15 is National Jaycee Week, and the local Jaycees have planned an orientation meeting Wednesday, Jan. 18 to acquaint interested men between the ages of 18 and 36 with the local groups.

The Livermore Jaycees will meet at the Rancher restaurant in Livermore at 7:30 p.m. In Pleasanton, a meeting is planned at the Val Vista Recreation Center, and the North Livermore Jaycee's will meet at Potter's Pizza.

Dick Jones of the Livermore Jaycees said they'd had "a particularly exciting 1977." The group was voted the number one chapter in the state for its community action and personal development programs.

Community action is the principle Jaycee function, said Jones. Last year the combined efforts of the area Jaycees produced over 200 projects.

Another function of the Jaycees is to help members develop leadership skills. The third function is the enjoyment of the community and members through social events. "These run the spectrum from Luau's to bowling tournaments to the art auction and even a car rally," Jones said.

For additional information about the orientation meeting, or the Jaycees, call Dick Jones at 443-4051 or Dan Brown at 443-7362.

Murray accepts open seat resumes

The Murray School District will take resumes from persons wishing consideration for the board seat vacated by Bob Foster through 10 a.m. on Monday, Jan. 30.

Trustees decided at Monday's meeting to accept resume-statements through that date, hold a candidates forum on the 30th at 8 p.m., interview selected candidates at 9 p.m. Monday, Feb. 6 and make an appointment on or before Tuesday, Feb. 14.

Provisions were also made for a second night of candidate interviews on Feb. 9 and a second candidates forum on Feb. 2. Places for the meetings have yet to be decided.

The board, on a 3-1 vote with Donald Biddle dissenting, decided to go by an appointive process rather than ask the county superintendent of schools to call an election.

Foster's unexpired term runs through March of 1979.

Persons in the Murray district wishing to submit their name for consideration should send a one page resume. An additional one page statement of their educational philosophies is optional.

The resumes should be directed to Peter W. Snyder, president, Murray School District board, c/o 7416 Brighton Dr., Dublin 94566.

Main opposition to opting for an election centered on the expense and the point, as Snyder noted, that the successful candidate in a June election would then have to run again barely nine months later.

The district must appoint a new board member within 30 days of a resignation, in this case by Feb. 15. Once an appointment is made, residents have 30 days in which to petition for an election.

If there is no call for an election, then the appointee may then take part in all actions of the board.

This marks the first time in at least the last six years a board has decided to use the appointive process to fill a board vacancy.

In the past, trustees have opted for an election — most recently to fill the positions vacated by JoAnne Bascom, Ron Aguirre, and Frank Stager.

Foster was elected in 1975 after Aguirre left the district and Linda Jeffery, presently vice president of the board, was elected after Mrs. Bascom resigned.

No money for AC Transit?

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An Oakland Democratic assemblyman wants to cut off AC Transit's property tax revenues as long as the East Bay buses remain halted by a strike that began Nov. 21.

Assemblyman Tom Bates said his bill, AB 2240, would reduce AC's share of property taxes according to the number of days the Alameda-Contra Costa Transit District stays on strike after Jan. 13.

The 1,800 drivers, clerks and mechanics of Local 192 of the Amalgamated Transit Workers union have been on strike, seeking improved pay and pension benefits. The union turned down a tentative agreement Sunday.

Bates said the district, which connects San Francisco with 25 East Bay cities, gets $22.4 million a year in property tax money, or 57 percent of its subsidy. The rest comes from gasoline taxes and federal and state subsidies.

Bates said he would try to get a waiver so that his bill, introduced Monday, could be considered without the usual 30-day waiting period.

Veteran CC Assessor plans 'long vacation'

Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — County Assessor E.F. "Fred" Wanaka announced Tuesday he will not seek re-election from the post he has held 16 years.

At the same time, his chief appraiser, Carl Rush, said he will seek election to the post in the June 6 primary.

To date, no one else has announced for the post, but Merlyn Nelson of Walnut Creek, auditor in the assessor's office, has taken out petitions for signatures in lieu of filing fees.

Wanaka, 62, said he is completing his 32nd year in county government, and plans "a nice, long vacation" when his term ends in December.

As the county assessor, he has been responsible for appraising all property for tax purposes, and maintaining the state-mandated assessment ratio of 25 per cent of market value.

In recent years, he has completed computerization of the system in an effort to avoid massive increase on residential property which resulted because parcel-by-parcel assessment could only be made every four to five years.

With the computer, each parcel can now be given a smaller increase based on averages, so that the parcel-by-parcel appraisal will be smaller.

Wanaka was criticized by the State Board of Equalization for giving homeowners a break.

Several years ago the board discovered he was discounting sales "points" from the appraised price of homes before setting the market value. This lowered the taxes on the homes, but the state board said it was illegal.

Rush, 54, a 28-year veteran of the assessor's office, has served as chief appraiser since 1967.

"If I am successful in my candidacy, I will exert every effort to insure that the interests of the taxpayers of Contra Costa are protected," Rush said.

"This includes continuing to press our legislative representatives to speedily enact property tax relief measures which have been promised so long and are needed so badly," he added.

Rush is one of the busiest department spokesmen, having appeared frequently before community groups to explain the assessor's role, which is controlled by the state constitution.

He is a member of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, an affiliate member of the Contra Costa Real Estate Board, and a member of the International Association of Assessing Officers and the State Association of County Assessors.

A retired reserve Army officer, Rush and his wife, Clariece, live in Martinez.

Questionnaire results

Greater airport security favored

LIVERMORE — The limited response to a questionnaire on airport security indicates a majority would like some type of security improvement.

The Airport Advisory Committee this week heard the results of a survey mailed to 180 airport tenants by the Livermore Valley Airmen's Association. Although only 53 responded to the queries, 32 of those were in favor of some "near term security" improvements, which could range from fencing to a barrier gate either at the hangars or main gate.

Fourteen felt the airport was ok as is, and did not want to see any changes. And 7 respondents were in favor of improvements, but want to wait for federal funding.

The survey will be discussed in depth at the committee's next meeting, Feb. 13, noon, at the Red Baron Restaurant.

Committee members heard oral reports from Public Works Director Dan Lee about progress on the West Clear Zone, which he said the city hopes to settle very soon.

A sample of the airport brochure being printed was handed around the meeting, and Lee said copies soon would be mailed to 10,000 pilots in the Bay area.

tower gave some statistics to the advisory group about the "ballooning increase in air traffic." He said the projected figure for the fiscal year 1978 is 213,250 landing and takeoff operations, and for fiscal year 1979 the figure is 225,984 operations.

Symposium will honor LLL scientist Seaborg

A Lawrence Livermore Laboratory scientist associated with the discovery of chemical elements 99 and 100 will join in a symposium at Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory next week marking the 25th anniversary of that achievement. Einsteinium and fermium were discovered in debris from the first thermonuclear explosion set off in 1952 in the South Pacific

Teams of scientists from several major laboratories contributed to the chemical isolation and identification of the new elements, which they named in honor of Enrico Fermi, known as the father of the nuclear age, and Albert Einstein, who proposed the theory of relativity. Glenn T. Seaborg, Nobel Laureate and arranger of the Jan. 23 symposium, will be joined by co-discoverers Gary H. Higgins of LLL; Albert Ghiorso of LBL; Charles I. Browne and Roderick W. Spence of Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in New Mexico; and Sherman M. Fried and Paul R. Fields of Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois in presenting recollections of their experiences in identifying and producing the elements.

Other members of the discovery team to be honored at the symposium include John R. Huizenga, formerly of Argonne and now at the University of Rochester; M.H. Studier, H. Diamond, J.F. Mech, G.L. Pyle, A. Hirsch and W.M. Manning, all of Argonne; H.L. Smith of Los Alamos; and the late Stanley G. Thompson of LBL.

Two LLL employees, Richard W. Hoff and E. Kenneth Huie, will be among several speakers at the symposium to discuss other properties of the two elements. Elements 99 and 100 were discovered unexpectedly as scientists routinely studied debris collected from the "Mike" explosion at Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands in November of 1952.

New nuclear safety effort seen in capital

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A sponsor of the 1976 Nuclear Initiative said Tuesday his group would push another nuclear safety initiative if the Legislature softens state nuclear safeguards or clears the way for the Sundesert plant. David Pesonen, chairman of Californians for Nuclear Safety, told a Capitol news conference that it would be "a betrayal of public trust" if the Legislature eased three 1976 state nuclear laws now.

He said if the Legislature does exempt San Diego Gas & Electric's proposed Sun-desert plant from the 1976 controls, or weakens those controls, his group would qualify "at least one nuclear initiative" for the November state ballot. Prop. 15 of June 1976, sponsored by Pesonen's group, was rejected by California voters after the Legislature approved three slightly less stringent bills drafted in an effort to prevent passage of Prop. 15. The laws ban new nuclear plant construction until the state Energy Commission declares that safe methods exist to reprocess nuclear fuel and store nuclear waste permanently.

Dublin students set on SC exchange plan

DUBLIN—Twenty Dublin High School students and their families will participate in the Domestic Student Exchange Program this year, the Dublin students traveling to Columbia, South Carolina, April 9-16.

Last year, 15 Dublin students traveled to Stoughton, Wisconsin, and later hosted students from that rural, dairy community.

Students from Spring Valley High School will come to Dublin for a week

April 23-30.

Through various fund-raisers, students have already collected approximately $1,600 for the program, but another $3,400 (to make $5,000) is needed, according to John Willoughby, student activities director and local director of the program.

Dublin students will travel by air from San Francisco to Atlanta and then take another flight from Atlanta into the South Carolina state capital of Columbia.

The program asks the schools to put down their preferences of areas they'd like to go to. The Dublin group's preference of South Carolina was right near the top, along with Hawaii.

Students presently set to take part in the program include seniors Andi Crumpler, Diane Garcia, Kelly Peterson, Mark Duncan, Karen Bozak, Angie Loder, Joni Scarmozzino, Tod Stein, and Kim Daly; juniors Wendy Miner, Rene Moss, Kathy Stokkeland, Debby Dugan; sophomores Sherrell Evans, Eric Vollbrecht, Lynette Lezcano, Cheryl Mohondro, Daneen Boespflug and Kathy Dugan, and freshman Laura Willoughby.

Vida doesn't show

Kuhn puts off Blue decision

Finley, Howsam and Kugh before the unproductive session

NEW YORK — The Oakland A's attempted trade of pitcher Vida Blue to the Cincinnati Reds remained in limbo when Commissioner Bowie Kuhn recessed the hearings after six hours Tuesday without any decision.

The hearing will continue next week.

Five witnesses gave sworn testimony at baseball's midtown offices here. A's owner Charlie Finley had begun his presentation when agreement was reached to adjourn until 10 a.m., EST, next Tuesday.

That apparently was the only agreement reached. At least three witnesses — including Finley, a representative of the Cincinnati Reds and Marvin Miller, executive director of the major league baseball players association — have yet to make their statements.

"I can't speak for anyone else, but I didn't learn anything new," Miller said when he emerged from the meeting. Miller said he appeared Tuesday "to protect the interests of the players and, if necessary, to protect the standard bargaining agreement."

The crux of the matter appeared to lie in an "informal guideline" that $400,000 was the maximum amount of cash that could be exchanged in a trade or sale.

Miller said presidents Chub Feeney of the National League and Lee MacPhail of the American League had admitted the existence of such a guideline in their sworn testimony and Kuhn confirmed that "there was a considerable amount of testimony on the subject."

Blue was dealt to the Reds for $1.75 million and minor league first baseman Dave Revering. Attempts to finalize the deal — placed in limbo since it was made Dec. 9 — failed to produce results despite hours of discussion.

Kuhn also admitted that he had suggested to both league presidents to explore the possibility of having the Reds include more players in the deal while lowering the amount of cash paid out.

"But as of now, that doesn't seem to have produced anything," Kuhn said.

Witnesses Tuesday were Reds President Bob Howsam, player relations advisor John Gaherin and Jim Holland, assistant to the general counsel for the commissioner's office.

All-star voting

Blazer pair tops list

NEW YORK — Bill Walton and Maurice Lucas, the power duo of Portland's defending champions, were named to the West team, while dazzling Julius Erving of the East was the leading vote-getter for the National Basketball Association All-Star Game in balloting announced Tuesday.

Lucas, the Trail Blazers' devastating forward, and Walton, Portland's smooth center, will head the West's starting lineup that also will include veteran forward Rick Barry of the Golden State Warriors and guards David Thompson of the Denver Nuggets and Paul Westphal of the Phoenix Suns.

Erving, winner of the Most Valuable Player award in last season's game, won by the West 125-124, will lead the East's starting five, which also will have Larry Kenon of the San Antonio Spurs at forward, Dave Cowens of the Boston Celtics at center, and Pete Maravich of the New Orleans Jazz and George Gervin of San Antonio at guards.

Each team will have six other players, to be picked by the 11 coaches in both the Eastern and Western conferences.

Jack Ramsay of Portland, whose Trail Blazers have the best record in the West, and Billy Cunningham, who replaced Gene Shue at Philadelphia early in the season and has directed the 76ers to the East's top winning percentage, will be the coaches for the 28th NBA All-Star Game, to be played Feb. 5 at the Omni in Atlanta. The East leads the series 17-10.

A record 1,397,272 fans in the league's 22 cities participated in the balloting, and Erving, in his second year in the league after an outstanding career in the American Basketball Association, received 396,503 votes in earning his second starting assignment.

Kenon, Erving's former teammate and frontcourt partner on the New York Nets of the ABA, was second among the East forwards with 229,322 votes. This will be Kenon's first All-Star start.

Cowens, selected to the All-Star team for the seventh time and starting for the fourth year, beat New York's Bob McAdoo for the East's

No. 1 center in the closest balloting. Cowens, who did not play last year because of an injury, garnered 222,109 votes to McAdoo's 214,834.

Maravich, the league's leading scorer, made the team for the fourth time — all as a starter — with 309,987 votes, while Gervin, the No. 2 scorer, earned his first start in two All-Star Games with 281,108 votes.

Thompson, fourth in the league in scoring, was the top vote-collector in the West, with 321,454. This will be his second All-Star Game and second start. Westphal, also in his second game and second start, received 264,006 votes.

Barry, the most experienced All-Star on either team — this will be his eighth appearance and sixth start — was second among West forwards, with 228,413 votes, behind Lucas' 307,461. Lucas will be playing in his second All-Star Game and making his first start.

Walton, injured after being selected to the West team last year, garnered 286,995 votes in gaining his first starting assignment.

Santa Clara-USF: a traditional tussle Ali: woeful 36

SAN FRANCISCO — The annual Santa Clara-San Francisco basketball series "is always exciting, and this year it is crucial for both teams," according to USF Coach Bob Gaillard.

Next week's games, already sold out and scheduled to be telecast, are between the teams which figured to fight it out for the West Coast Athletic Conference championship.

The main reason the games — Wednesday at Santa Clara, Saturday at USF — qualify as crucial is that neither team can feel comfortable with a split of the series.

"Nevada-Reno is 4-0, with two of those wins on the road, and certainly has a good shot at the title," Gaillard told basketball writers Tuesday. His team and Santa Clara are 3-1 in the standings.

Two more sure sellouts on the WCAC schedule are Reno's Feb. 23 visit to Santa Clara and its Feb. 25 game at USF which will be regionally televised.

Santa Clara Coach Carroll Williams called the Broncos lopsided weekend victory over Portland "the best performance by a Santa Clara team in several years."

The USF Dons' three victories last week, including one over No. 7 Notre Dame, convinced Gaillard "We're playing with consistency."

Sophomores Kurt Rambis and Londale Theus, somewhat disappointing early in the season, played sensationally in Santa Clara's 103-59 romp over Portland. The Dons' top performer was James Hardy, named WCAC player of the week, and reserve guard Sam Williams began making important contributions after missing some time with an ankle injury.

The WCAC and Pacific-8 standings are almost on hold this week, with most teams facing non-conference opponents, and the Pacific Coast Athletic Association action is mostly in Southern California, with the exception of San Diego State's Saturday game at Fresno State, PCAA co-leader at 2-0 with a 12-2 over-all mark.

St. Mary's Gaels open their new gym Saturday night, facing Stanford.

The Stanford Cardinals notched their first Pac-8 victory of the season by beating Washington Saturday, and Coach Dick DiBiasi said the play of forward George Schader just about convinced him the senior forward is back to top form.

"Everyone was pulling for George after he'd undergone two knee operations and a minor foot operation. He feels, and we're about ready to say, that he's come all the way back," DiBiasi said.

In the fall, because of his tender foot, Schader couldn't do much more than shoot in practice, the coach noted. That might have helped his shooting, as he showed by going 19-for-31 in two games last week.

"But he still hadn't proven he had the mobility back — until the Washington game," said DiBiasi of the 6-foot-7 player who totaled 24 points against the Huskies.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Once bombastic Muhammad Ali went into a Garbo-like "I want to be alone" shell Tuesday and tossed a damp blanket over a party celebrating his 36th birthday.

"I don't want to talk to nobody," the heavyweight ring champion insisted after a battery of newsmen, flown in from such sites as New York, Toronto and San Francisco, descended on Chris Dundee's old Fifth Avenue gym in Miami Beach, where Ali began his pro career 17 years ago.

He sat in his dressing room and sulked while reporters and cameramen waited impatiently outside.

Dour and tight-lipped, the champion emerged after a 27-minute delay, then stood by glumly while Miami Beach Mayor Leonard Haber presented him with a gold key to the city and an honorary police badge.

Top Rank, Inc., sponsors of Ali's Feb. 15 title defense against Leon Spinks in Las Vegas, Nev., produced a 3x2-foot birthday cake with a gleaming crown and red boxing gloves made of marzipan.

Publisher Irving Rudd read a glowing tribute from Vice President Walter Mondale and apologized that a letter from President Carter had been misdirected to Ali's home in Chicago.

Lloyd swings into gear

Steve Lloyd could be on his way to "superstar" status as a distance runner if his performance Sunday in San Francisco is any indication.

Lloyd, a junior at Livermore High School, took first out of 400 runners in the San Francisco Yacht Club race with a 24:47 clocking over the six-mile distance.

He ran for the Livermore Running Club and his performance was the more impressive considering the fact that he has been prone to injuries.

"We're really pleased that he did that well," said Livermore High. "We've generally tried to bring him along easily because of his injuries. I was surprised to hear he did that well."

Lloyd finished third in the East Bay Athletic League cross-country race last fall with a 14:45 clocking over three miles.

But he will be tackling an even more awesome task this spring.

"We plan to run him in the mile, 880 and two-mile," Nix remarked. "This race proves he is coming along good."

Lloyd's rapid improvement means Livermore will have a potent distance running team next spring. Rob Wentworth, another junior, won the North Coast Section championship in cross-country last fall. Both Wentworth and Lloyd narrowly missed making the state track meet last spring.

Callender's 22 pace Dublin

Joanne Callender tossed in 22 points and Marge Downing added 13 as Dublin tripped host Foothill High School, 47-41, in East Bay Athletic League girls basketball last night in Pleasanton.

Chris Rhodes was high for the Falcons with 19 points while Cheryl Eldred added eight.

In junior varsity play, Livermore edged Monte Vista, coached by former Times' reporter Clay Kallam, 33-30.

Box scores of those games are in today's scoreboard with a larger story, wrapping up the EBAL action, appearing tomorrow.

Ron Freeman

A season ends—suddenly

The Chabot College wrestling team is hurting; but not as much as their 190 pound sophomore Ron Freeman.

The All Star grappler will miss the rest of this season because of a sudden hernia. The Granada High School grad is scheduled for surgery tomorrow. "I'm upset, sure, but there's nothing I can do about it," Freeman explained. "It just happened. I'll have the surgery and get it fixed up."

His doctors have estimated a six-week recovery period, which, "puts wrestling out of the question," he said.

Another person equally upset is Gladiators head coach Zack Papachristos.

"It's really going to hurt us. He was the top wrestler. The way it happened, a major injury like that was very unexpected," Papachristos lamented. "But the team has indicated that we'll continue to win," he predicted.

He was referring to the De Anza Invitational Saturday, when, despite the absence of Freeman, Chabot captured the tournament over 22 other Community Colleges.

"We won the tournament without him, and that's a plus," Papachristos said.

How much will the loss of Freeman hurt the Glads in the long run? The coach related that it would have hurt the squad a lot more if he was the only sound wrestler they had.

"But we have a pretty good nucleus. We just aren't going to have the depth that we've had in the past," he predicted.

"We have enough alance where we'll be able to overcome it. His point contribution is where it's going to hurt the most," Papachristos said.

Freeman's replacement in the 190 division is freshman Ben Lafever. The prediction made by Papachristos about Lafever's ability to do the job is not overly optimistic.

"I just don't think that Ben has had the exposure or the experience that Ron has had. Neither has he had the success in winning," Papachristos said. "But he is working very hard to try and fill the shoes of Ron," the coach added.

With the pressure on him though, Papachristos predicted that Lafever will improve rapidly.

Nobody is really sure how Freeman about, but it's possible dilemma came that the hernia was activated sometime during the Fresno State Tournament two weeks ago, where Freeman maintained his unbeaten record by taking first.

"I didn't have any problems that Saturday. But Monday night it started hurting. I just thought I had an infection or something," Freeman said.

He explained that the type of hernia he has is a type that is usually detected before a person is a year old v l.

"It's most likely that I've had it since birth. It could have happened any time, but the wrestling might have aggravated it," he said.

Assistant coach Rich Swift said that Freeman is the best 190-pounder in the state.

"The consensus among all the coaches is the same. He is head and shoulders above the rest," Swift noted.

The effect on the team, according to Swift, will be that, "the team will really start pulling together. This will make other people strap down," he predicted.

Freeman said that his future as a matman depends on what scholarship offers are made him. Papachristos said that his star will probably be able to pick and choose wherever he wants to go.

"This really blew a lot of plans for me," Freeman said. But he still has in mind attending the rest of Nhabot's matches and meets.

"I still think they're my team," he said.

Was Dallas a lock?

On Sports

The Dallas Cowboy Super Bowl victory over the Denver Broncos. Was it a surprise or to be expected?

There are a lot of varying opinions on this. Most oddsmakers had the Cowboys picked by about five points because of their previous Super Bowl experience and the ability of quarterback Roger Staubach.

Roger Staubach

However, a lot of writers and close followers of the pro football scene this season picked the Broncos because they represented the "tougher" conference (the American Football Conference) and they had played a tougher schedule in making it to the Super Bowl, beating defending National Football League champion Oakland to get there.

Even after the Broncos had defeated the Raiders 30-7 in their first match-up of the season Denver still had its detractors. These people got on the Broncos' backs after the Raiders' convincing 24-14 victory (after leading 24-0) in the return engagement in Denver two weeks later.

However, Denver dispelled many of the rumors of their immediate "demise" when they defeated the Baltimore Colts, Pittsburgh Steelers and gave the Cowboys a tough go without quarterback Craig Morton in a meaningless last-game of the regular season.

But the Raiders entered the playoffs as a flight favorite, and topped Baltimore in overtime in the first round. But the Broncos took advantage of Pittsburgh mistakes and toppled the Central Division champions to advance to the conference finals against the Raiders.

What happened against the Raiders is something almost every football fan in the country has been made well aware of the past two weeks.

Again, the Broncos were opportunistic, taking advantage of a questionable call on a fumble by Denver's Rob Lyle to score what eventually was the winning touchdown.

But the Broncos' rugged defense has forced turnovers all season and many people thought the same thing would occur against Dallas.

After all, the Broncos had been through the meat grinder and the Cowboys had danced their way through the NFC playoffs against merger competition, destroying a weak Chicago team and coasting by the aging Minnesota Vikings.

While the betting line was on Dallas, secretly, many people (including myself) thought the Broncos had come of age and would topple the Cowboys in a rugged defensive struggle.

The AFC was the vastly superior conference and it would again tell against Dallas. But we were wrong.

The Cowboys aren't the Vikings or the Washington Redskins (another NFC team which has lost in the Super Bowl). Dallas bucks the dull, stale style of the NFC teams. My gosh, the Cowboys even had a touchdown pass from a running back (Robert Newhouse) against the Broncos.

Staubach's name is legend in the NFL as a miracle worker. He brought the Cowboys back from certain defeat against Minnesota in the opening round of the 1975 playoffs and against San Francisco in the final quarter of the 1972 playoff opener.

He's a scrambler, much like Francis Tarkenton of the Vikings, but with more finesse, and a lot better supporting cast.

Dallas should have been the NFC's representative last season. In fact, the Cowboys are head and shoulders above any other NFC squad in talent and playoff-smarts.

So maybe the people who make the betting odds knew what they were doing all the time.

The Broncos were in their first Super Bowl. Despite the fact they had been through a tough schedule and defeated the defending NFL champions to make the Super Bowl, the AFC champions might have been a bit over-enthusiastic about the contest.

There's a two-week layoff between the conference finals and the BIG ONE, and all that pressure builds up on the players. The Broncos, even the veterans like Lyle Alzado and Randy Gradishar, seemed to feel the pressure more than the Cowboys did.

If the Cowboys and Denver meet again next year in the Super Bowl, things might be a bit different. Denver will have had a year under its belt and the almost Hollywood-like build up to the game probably won't affect them as much.

But this year it did.

And the Cowboys, swift, huge and machine-like, under the guidance of head coach Tom Landry, swept their way to pro football's highest glory.

Chabot visits favored Owls

LOS ALTOS HILLS — Chabot College will be fighting to stay in the race for a Golden Gate Conference basketball playoff berth when it meets a rugged Foothill team tonight.

Foothill, co-favored with San Jose City College for the GGC crown in the pre-season polls, is 3-1 in league play and 14-2 overall.

The Owls have plenty of height and experience and the Gladiators will have to counteract this with their quickness and aggressive play.

EBAL basketball

Resurgent Cal visits 'Pokes

California High's rejuvenated basketball team gets its biggest test of the young season tonight when it travels to Livermore High School to play the Cowboys in an East Bay Athletic League contest.

The Grizzlies, 2-2, are coming off an impressive 72-56 win over Granada. They played most of the game without their leading scorer, forward Chuck Cary, but still maintained offensive potency with the help of a strong bench.

Livermore, 3-1, currently stands in a three-way tie for first place with Amador Valley and Monte Vista. The Cowboys blitzed Foothill, 60-46, Friday night.

Three more games dot the schedule tonight, all of them beginning with freshman encounters at 5 p.m., followed by the junior varsity game at 6:30 and the varsity at 8. Dublin hosts Granada, Amador Valley journeys across I-680 to play Foothill, while Monte Vista goes across the same highway 15 miles north to play San Ramon in the Danville inter-city rivalry.

For Granada to stay in contention with the rest of the league after Friday's beating, they must beat the Gaels on Dublin's home floor. But the road is a familiar place thus far for the Mats: they beat Livermore in the 'Pokes' own cozy gym, while knocking Monte Vista from the undefeated ranks in their Alamo/Danville hideaway. Both losses, to Amador and Cal, have come on Friday nights at home.

The Gaels are currently trying to break a three-game losing streak, after opening the season with a win over Foothill. Dublin's main problem has been an inability to capitalize on easy shots. They've been able to compete with most teams on the physical level, but have had hard luck in trying to ultimately put the ball in the basket.

SMC vs. 1-man band

MORAGA — St. Mary's College will be trying to slow down a one-man scoring machine when it takes on Portland State tonight in a non-league basketball game here at the Gael gym.

The Gaels will be facing Freeman Williams, a leaping 6-foot-4 guard who canned 66 points in one game last week.

"They're not a big team, but they're quick and dangerous with Williams," said St. Mary's coach Frank La Porte. "That 66-point effort last week might have made him the leading scorer in the nation."

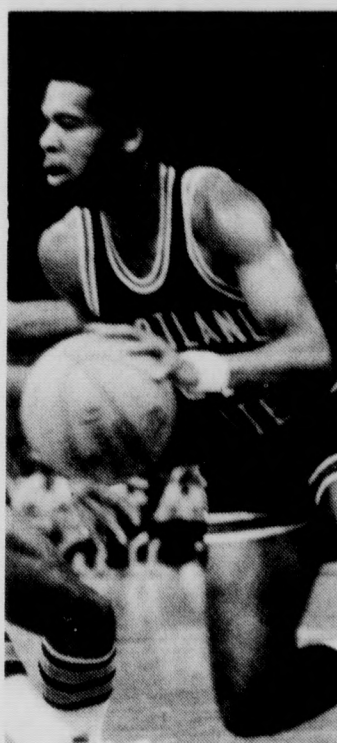

The Gaels are 1-3 in West Coast Athletic Conference play and 8-4 overall.

Former Livermore High School star Ted Wood does not start for the Gaels but is a steady performer coming off the bench.

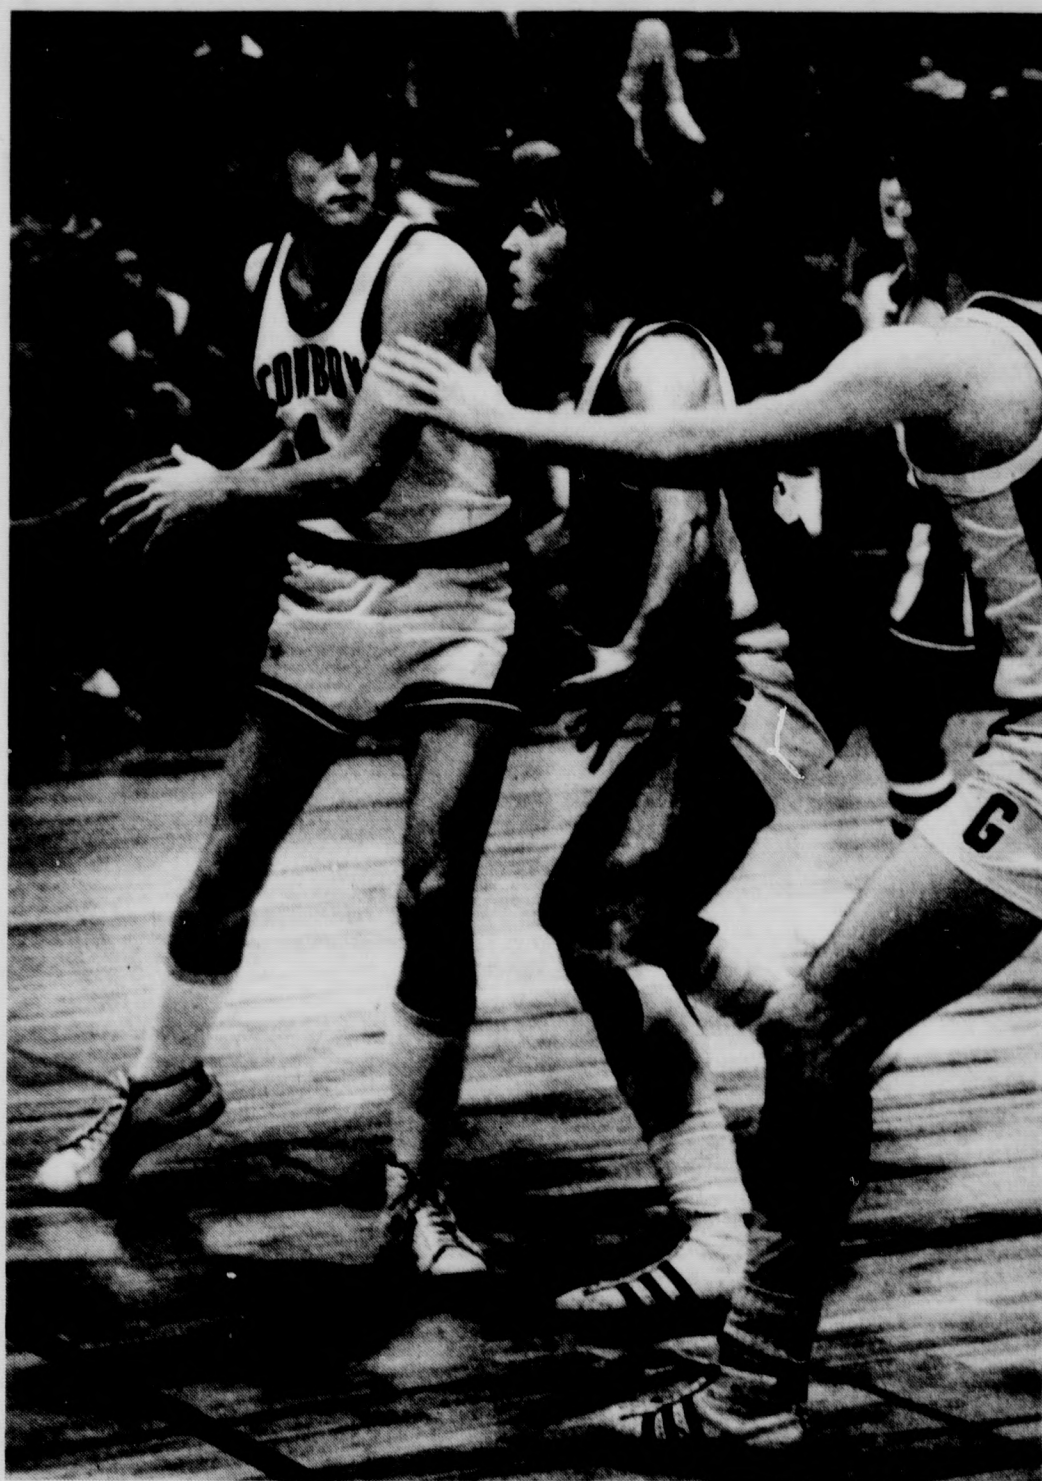

"He's a real hustler," said La Porte of the 6-foot-2 sophomore. "He's steady and is a very smart player at guard for us."

St. Mary's should again be paced by former Santa Rosa Junior College star Ken Jones. A 6-foot-5 junior, Jones has been the Gaels' leading scorer this season and is considered the best prospect St. Mary's has had since Tom Meschery back in the early 1960's.

The Gaels will meet Stanford in another non-conference game Saturday night here before resuming the WCAL wars the following week against Portland and Seattle at the Gael gym.

Freeman Williams

Dick Patterson and the Cowboys are waiting for upstart Grizzlies.

Rutledge tops bowling

Dee Rutledge led the way in winter league play at the Granada Bowl in Livermore last week.

Rutledge, bowling for the Women's Invitational, fired games of 230-203-189 for a 622 series.

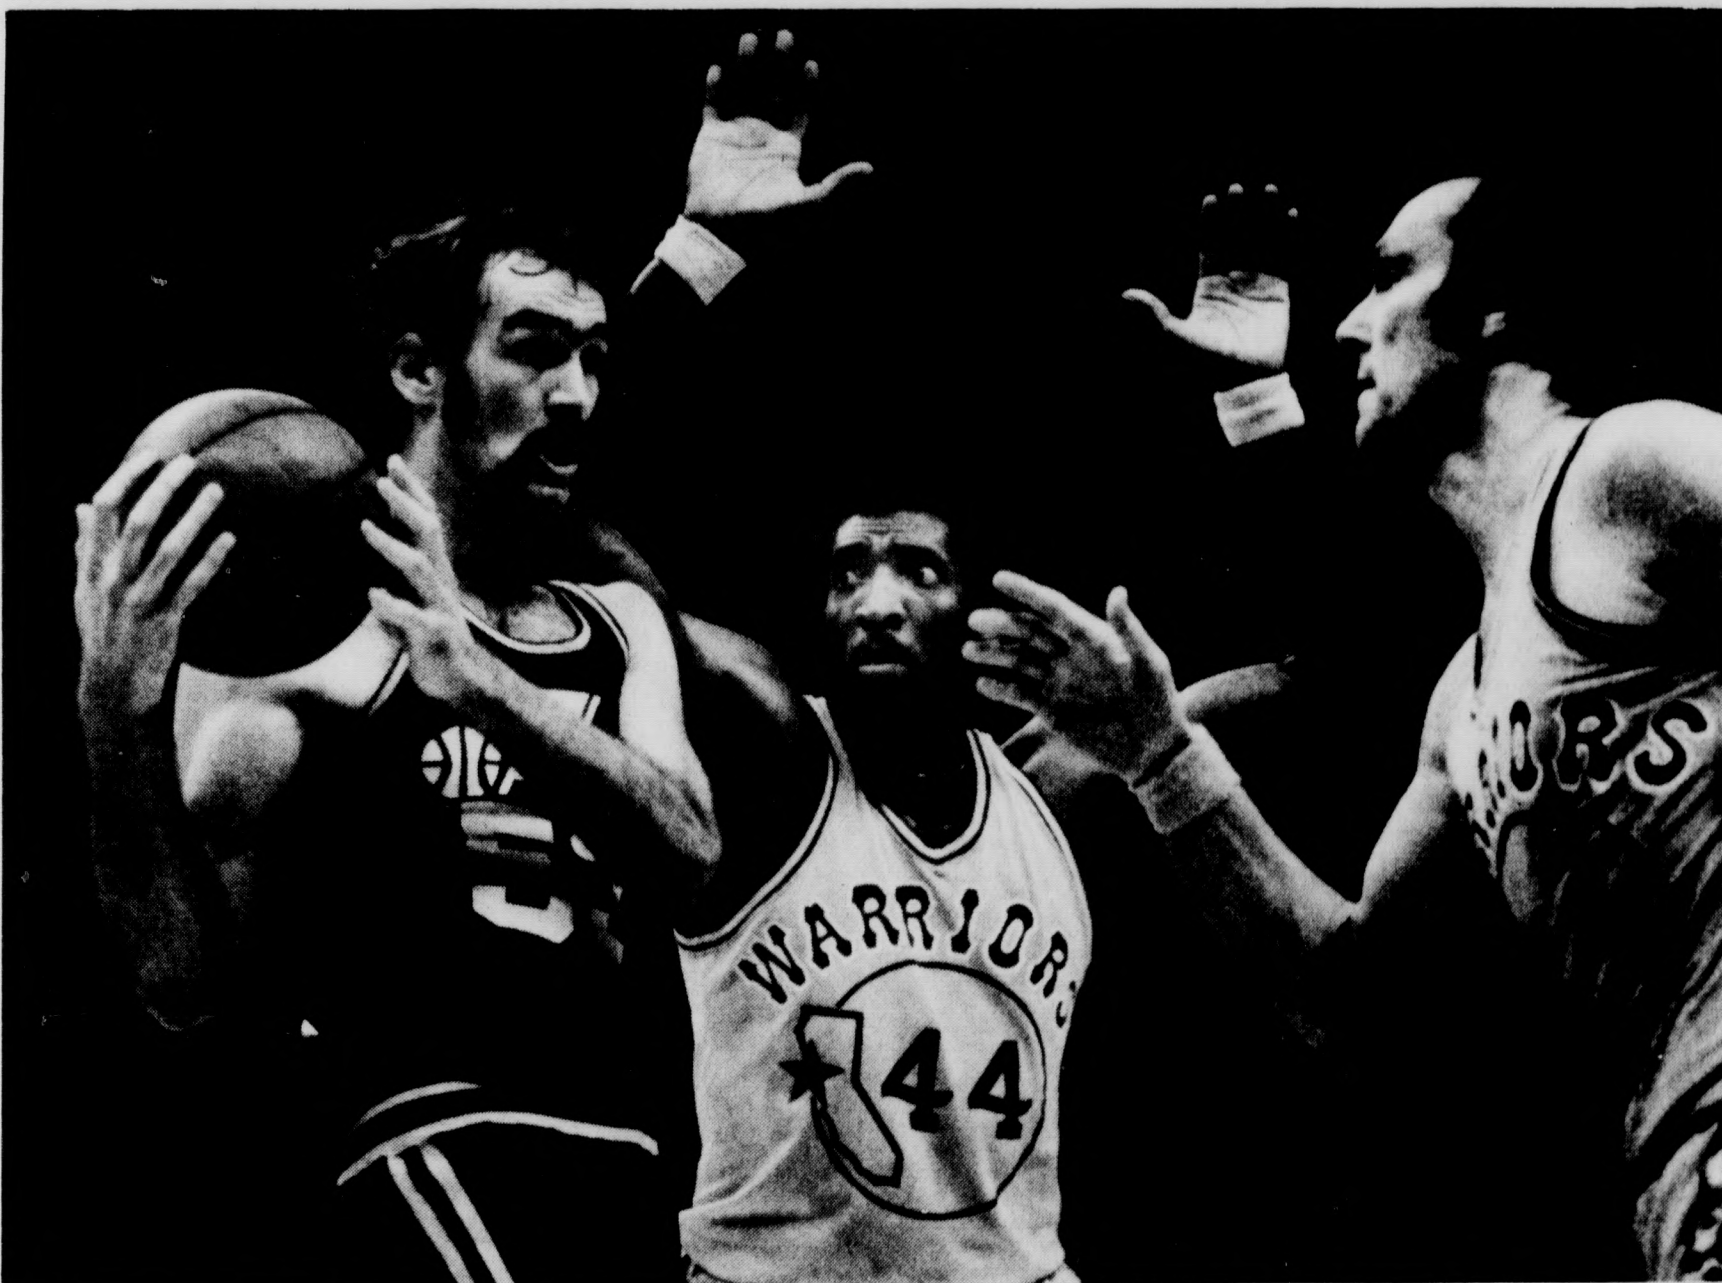

Cris Parker topped the Nancy's Gang Mixed League with a 223 high game and 552 series. Dave Tosa had a 626 series and 245 high game in the Guys and Dolls League. Leo Hoffman bowled a 247 high game in the Cheyenne League.

Tomako Eustace had a 555 series and a 202 high game in the Lazy Loafers League. Sunday Tempo action saw Carlo Schroeder bowl her first 200 game and 500 series of the campaign with a 206 and 504.

Joe Leach led the Senior Citizens League with a 204 game and 538 series. Tom Mills had a 225 game and 600 series in the Reno Mixed League while Barbara Ferraro topped the ladies with her 189 and 535 series.

Hazel Gregory bowled a 201 game and 508 series in the Bowling Belles League.

The new spring leagues are being formed with loops for the entire family. For further information call Granada Bowl at 447-5600.

Clifford Ray, the Golden State Warriors center, looks wary of Stanford guard Rich Kelley in Golden State's recent loss.

Bullets test GS' erratic ammo

OAKLAND — The Golden State Warriors, a team whose only consistency has been inconsistency, meets the Washington Bullets tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Coliseum Arena.

The Warriors dropped a 118-111 decision to New Orleans Saturday and have had ample time to work out the bugs that spoiled what had been a four-for-five success string.

The Warriors were up by 18 on the Jazz in the first quarter of the game Saturday, but lost all of that lead and a subsequent seven point advantage.

Even in the final seconds, when coach Al Attles picked up a technical foul, the Warriors had a chance to win, but 10 consecutive free throws by Stanford graduate, and Menlo Park resident, Rich Kelley, ruined any last ditch comeback hopes.

Four points were literally stolen from the Warriors on in-bound passes and Attles said,

"If you thought I was mad when I got the T, you should have seen me at the half...it didn't work."

His half-time lecture might not have worked Saturday, but the last time Attles had four days to work his men.

Livermore's Mike Roche takes time out from preparing his car to pose

Rocke looks to Long Beach

Livermore's Mike Roche has been in the racing business since he sped around town in a go-cart when he was 10 years old.

A few decades and four race cars later, Roche gets his biggest test when he will compete in the Long Beach Grand Prix March 31 through April 2.

Rocke will rely on his black and white MARNH racer, which he expects to run upwards of 160 miles per hour.

Since buying his first race car five years ago, Roche has participated in such races as Ontario, Laguna Seca, Sears Point, Vancouver and the La Batt Series in Canada.

In 1976, Roche finished second in the San Francisco Bay Regionals.

Nearly 80,000 spectators are expected for the Long Beach event.

Fly-casting can be tough

SAN FRANCISCO — Standing on the bank of a pond with a fishing rod in your hands usually is a pretty safe activity, but world casting champion Steve Rajeff can recall at least one hazardous moment.

Rajeff, a five-time champ at the age of 21, remembers one cast when the line snagged behind him and whipped out of control.

"It wrapped around my neck twice and the plug hit me about an inch below my eye," says Rajeff, a student at San Francisco State.

"Sometimes it can be kind of scary when you've got 30 feet or more of line whipping around on a windy day. You have to know what you're doing."

Rajeff, at 10, turned a young boy's fascination with hooks, lines and sinkers into what he thinks will be a lifelong occupation.

Rajeff has won the little-publicized world casting championship every year since he was 16 and sporting goods companies are already urging him to turn pro and promote their products.

Not well known in the United States, the sport of casting for distance and accuracy is popular elsewhere in the world. When Rajeff defended his title this year in Norway, there were competitors from 14 countries. About 40 nations belong to international casting groups.

"I want to compete as an amateur for a few more years," says Rajeff, who is majoring in marketing in preparation for a career with an equipment manufacturer promoting the sport.

"That's something nobody has ever done to any extent," he says. "It's a great form of recreation and there's a large number of fishermen in America who would like competitive casting if they tried it."

There are only about 1,500 to 2,000 competitive casters in the United States, while in West Germany, for instance, 150,000 are active and the sport receives a government subsidy, Rajeff says.

Rajeff considers himself "a very good fisherman." He has a summer job as a fishing guide in Alaska and says his sport has helped make him a better fisherman.

"Casting has helped me because I have learned how to deal with winds and various weather conditions and how to read the water."

Competitive casting is divided into two categories — casting for accuracy and casting for distance — and is subdivided into various events based on the weights of plugs.

At this year's world championships, Rajeff took the overall title despite winning only one of 11 events — the fiveeighths ounce, two-handed distance toss with a cast of 350 feet. He holds the world record for two-handed distance casting with a one ounce plug at 528 feet.

While strength and technique are important in both distance and accuracy competition, casting for accuracy relies on good eye-hand coordination, depth perception and hours of practice.

"Casting is more like a skill than a physical feat," says Rajeff.

Running shoot trials were a big success

Terry Ludlow, chairman of the running deer committee of the Livermore - Pleasanton Rod and Gun Club, reports a wet but well-attended practice shoot last weekend.

Bill Caldwell remarked that dedicated shooters will come out in any kind of weather, just as deer hunters will brave any storm for the sport. Local people and a number from Sacramento and San Jose, as well as places in between, were on hand for the practice.

February 5 is the date of the next competition shoot at the local club. If you reload, check to see that they feed correctly and chamber well. Failures are usually caused by improper reloads.

With the recent rains, there should be plenty of ducks for everyone. We can't blame the drought anymore if we come home empty-handed. You should have the best chance of the season this weekend.

Bob and Ila Taylor's Trap Shooting Country Club has announced a $100,000 trap shooting tournament in the Las Vegas area January 23 through 29.

A special rate of rooms from the Golden Nugget and Casino will be featured, with free bus transportation to and from Taylor's Trap Shooting Country Club.

For more information about the shoot, contact Bob Taylor, P.O. Box 1737, Las Vegas; or phone him at (702) 645-1399.

Leroy Heins fished Del Valle Reservoir both Saturday and Sunday, and came out with three trout each day.

"It rained so much, I just about gave up," said Leroy. But I stayed on, and it paid off — but not at a very rapid rate!"

He stated that his bait was small marshmallows with just one salmon oil, and one split shot sinker.

Al Hinchaw took in the Los Banos Refuge last Saturday and came out with a limit — one drake spoonie, three hen wiggon, and three drake mallards.

"I went clear to the east end of Area IV and I'll tell you there is some really deep water out there. I was right to the top of my waders when I got that last drake, but I just couldn't give up," Al said.

Dennis Stone and Frank Stuart wound up with a limit of big birds last Saturday. They report that they weren't doing so well in the morning, then the wind shifted and grew quite strong.

Birds were winging into the wind less than 25 yards high, Dennis said, and that was when they got a limit.

Inflation is causing prices to rise again on almost everything. This will no doubt affect the price of components for reloading. Wholesale prices are due to rise, and retail can't be far behind. This is a good time of year to stock up on your favorite components.

Perhaps you have a 38/40 Win tucked away in your gun cabinet and have been wondering how to load it. First step might be to get your empty cases all together, sort them out and discard the old balloon head type if you find any. Pick out the solid head cases, clean them well, then run them through the sizer.

Trim them to 1.300 to 1.302 (but make them all the same length as this helps when it comes to crimping the cases on the bullets. Those 38/40 cases are rather fragile and are inclined to buckle or collapse when crimping onto the bullet.

Size your bullets (the cast ones) to no more than .002 over the groove diameter of your barrel. Probably a good cast bullet diameter would be 1400. But it's best to slug the bore of your favorite shooting iron and see what its diameter really is.

A good cast bullet (for me, that is) is a combination of lead and tin, not too hard — a mixture of one part tin to 20 or 25 parts lead — as most of the pressures and velocities of the 38/40 W.C.F. are not too high.

If you have some old cases with the small primers, it's best not to use them as they may be cracked and brittle from just old age. It's better to use new solid head cases.

The Earthquakes will open their home season April 9 against California Surf at Spartan Stadium.

Stomper general manager Dick Berg expects a sellout of 54,000 to see the Quake-Stomper opener.

Berg is delegating 10,000 tickets to the Earthquakes to dispose of and will take care of the other 44,000 himself. The tickets will become available starting March 5 at the Stompers' office and all BASS outlets in Northern California. The East Bay Children's Hospital is sponsoring the event.

The Stompers' 30-game schedule call for 15 home games at the Coliseum. The season-finish will also be against the Earthquakes, through this time in San Jose.

The defending NASL champion New York Cosmos will visit Oakland July 21. It will be their only Bay Area appearance in 1978. The NASL runners-up Seattle Sounders will be here Aug. 2 for Oakland's last home game.

The 'Quakes will host three expansion clubs this year, Memphis, New England and Detroit. The July 9 contest against the Los Angeles Aztecs is set to be nationally televised.

All Wednesday and Saturday games will go at 8 p.m.

The Earthquakes are still selling season tickets (408-998-KICK) and expect to surpass last year's record total of 14,000 season tickets. The club has already sold more than 10,000 tickets.

The NASL playoffs will start Aug. 8-9 with the Soccer Bowl '78 scheduled for Aug. 27 at Giants Stadium.

Gordy Ceresino Earns Citation

Sun Bowl "Lineman of the Game," Stanford Linebacker Gordy Ceresino, has been named Northern California's Athlete of the Month for December by members of the citizens Savings Athletic Foundation's Awards Board.

Ceresino, among the country's top middle blockers, turned in by far his top performance as a Cardinal defender, as he was credited with 18 tackles and four assists. Stanford's Big Red's ravaged the LSU Tigers in annual action at El Paso's Sun Bowl ... 24-14.

A first-team Pac-8 choice (second team as a sophomore last year). In a conference loaded with quality linebackers, the former Southland prep star (Notre Dame High, Sherman Oaks) has been the top tackler on the varsity in both 1976 & 1977.

"He reminds me a lot of Nick Buoniconti," says Coach Bill Walsh. "He's explosive, quick, decisive and relentless. He's the focal point of our entire defense."

Had an award been available, Ceresino would have been the winner of the "Top Defensive Player" award in the '75 North-South Shrine high school game at the Rose Bowl.

won by his side (North) 21-13. Gordy distinguished himself that evening as he has in every game played since.

An insight into Ceresino's outlook on the future appeared in the Shrine Game program prior to his entering Stanford.

He was one of 10 Southland scholar-athletes and boasted a 3.3 grade point average. "That won't mean anything at Stanford," he pointed out.

Average income up, buying power lags

NEW YORK (AP) — Surveys show that salary increases last year generally averaged out to 8 percent or more, a rate that if continued would double dollar income in about nine years.

And therein is a source of middle-class discontent: Dollar income is not real income; dollar income soars, but buying power trails far behind. In its analysis of responses from 1,100 corporations, the American Compensation Association found pay raises of all sorts — merit, cost-of-living, general — averaged 8.2 percent in 1978.

Studying replies from more than 300 companies, Sibson & Co., a management consulting firm, came up with a figure of 8.5 percent for those who received merit increases during last year.

Now deduct 5.6 percent for inflation; that was the average for 1977. Even if we assume that a pay raise of 3 percent remains, and is continued, the recipient's income wouldn't double for 24 years.

"Economic Week," a Citibank publication, approached the illusion from a different perspective: Its editors created a hypothetical family and charted its financial course over the next nine years.

The family was assumed to grow from three persons to five over those nine years, and to progress from renting its living space to owning its own house. Its income was assumed to rise to $42,600 from $17,700. The income figures were not random choices. Instead, they represent the maximum wages subject to Social Security taxes projected in the new Social Security law.

The increase is a whopping 140 percent, or better than 10 percent a year — sufficient you might say to feed dreams of success and all that success suggests.

Now the rub: A good deal of the increase will reflect inflation rather than increased well-being; and the tax burden will rise much faster than income.

To compute the tax, the Citibank economists applied the new Social Security law. Then income taxes were computed by assuming Congress would enact a version of the administration's income tax proposals. Specifically, they assumed the tax changes would involve a different treatment of tax exemptions, and a reduction of two percentage points per rate bracket. "The result," they found, "is an increase in combined income taxes and Social Security taxes of 231 percent in the same nine years, or an annual rate of increase of more than 14 percent."

Taxes would rise faster than income not only because of prospective increases in Social Security taxes, but also because of the progressive nature of the income tax.

Now enters inflation. If it were to average 5 percent — which is lower than last year's rate and the rate projected for 1978 — after-tax buying power in 1987 would have increased by 42 percent.

Energy plan sale pitch a cure all?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trying to sell his energy program, President Carter has advertised his stalled proposals as prescriptions for about everything except the flu.

He doesn't claim his program is a cure for all the ills the administration has linked to energy, only a treatment. But that reservation is getting lost in the sales pitch.

As a result, the product may not live up to expectations.

At the same time, there is also a risk that when — and if — Congress gets around to passing the energy measures, they will be seen as a solution to a problem that is not solved that easily.

The program the White House is pushing represents at best a first step toward managing the problem. When he proposed his energy plan 10 months ago, Carter said as much. "It is a problem we will not solve in the next few years, and it is likely to get progressively worse through the rest of this century," he said then.

That reminder is worth remembering as Congress returns on Thursday, with unfinished energy measures still snarled in a deadlock over natural gas price controls.

Even when that issue is settled, House and Senate negotiators will have to work out an agreement on disputed tax proposals before there can be final action on the administration package of tax, regulation and conservation measures.

Carter has said he is confident the bills will be approved early this year. But there's no guarantee of it, and there probably is some more selling to be done.

The president came back from his seven-nation trip to report that he found grave concern in every foreign capital at U.S. inaction on energy.

"They are looking to our country to see whether we have the will, the resolve, to deal squarely with our energy problems, which are also becoming their problems," Carter said.

He went on to link the energy bills to the economic health of Western democracy. "... In Paris and in Brussels, our own allies expressed concern about whether we can and will enact strong energy legislation," Carter told a news conference Jan. 13. "If our own economy is not strong, if our strength is being sapped by excessive imports, then we can't provide the kind of leadership and stability on which the economic well-being of the Western democracies rest so heavily."

And there was more. With the value of the dollar down in world money markets, and the $45 billion annual price tag of oil imports a factor in that decline, Carter said his energy program is to curb the use of oil and other natural fuels.

In addition, Carter has said excessive oil imports are causing unemployment, 40,000 jobs for very $1 billion increase in imports. "With those dollars that go overseas we are in effect exporting American jobs," he said.

There's no question that all those problems are related to energy. There's little doubt that they will persist, with or without the administration energy program. It represents a beginning in confronting energy problems, and it would, as Carter has said, reflect a national will to deal with them.
